Pakistan Storm Survivors Now Face Cholera Threat

Soviet Robot Exploring Lunar Surface

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet scientists soft-landed a robot spaceship on the moon today and then sent an eight-wheel vehicle trundling over the lunar surface in a series of earth-controlled experiments.

Lunokhod I—the first vehicle on the moon—rolled down a special gangway from its mothership early today two hours 41 minutes after Luna 17 slid down to a soft landing in the moon's Sea of Rains at 6:47 a.m. (10:47, p.m. EST Monday), the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Lunokhod—the name means moon vehicle—is carrying scientific apparatus, control gear, radio communications systems and television observation equipment to perform experiments monitored back on earth, Tass said.

"For the first time in the history of astronautics an automatic moon vehicle, controlled from earth, was taken to the moon and began scientific investigations," Tass said.

Moon Truck Crawls 65 Feet

The moon truck crawled 65 feet away from its landing point in initial experiments, Tass added. The Lunokhod is controlled from a special communications centre in the Soviet Union, and scientists are using television cameras aboard the revolutionary vehicle for information on its position and the nature of the surrounding lunarscape.

Soviet science has entered an age of "effective new means of moon exploration with the help of automatic machines," Tass said as it gave word of the Russian space spectacular.

Tass also reported that both Lunokhod and the Luna spaceship carried Soviet flags and pennants and bas-reliefs of Lenin.

All systems aboard Lunokhod were functioning normally, Tass added. The Russians had given no previous indication that anything as dramatic as the Lunokhod experiment had been planned for the Luna 17 moon mission.

Soviets Favor Automation

Observers said the achievement underlines the Russian enthusiasm for space exploration by automated means and reflects the technical lengths to which they are carrying their unmanned space probe program.

Tass also revealed that the moon vehicle is carrying a piece of foreign equipment—a French-built reflector for laser location experiments.

France and the Soviet Union have been co-operating in space techniques for some time but this is believed the first time a Russian ship has carried non-Soviet equipment.

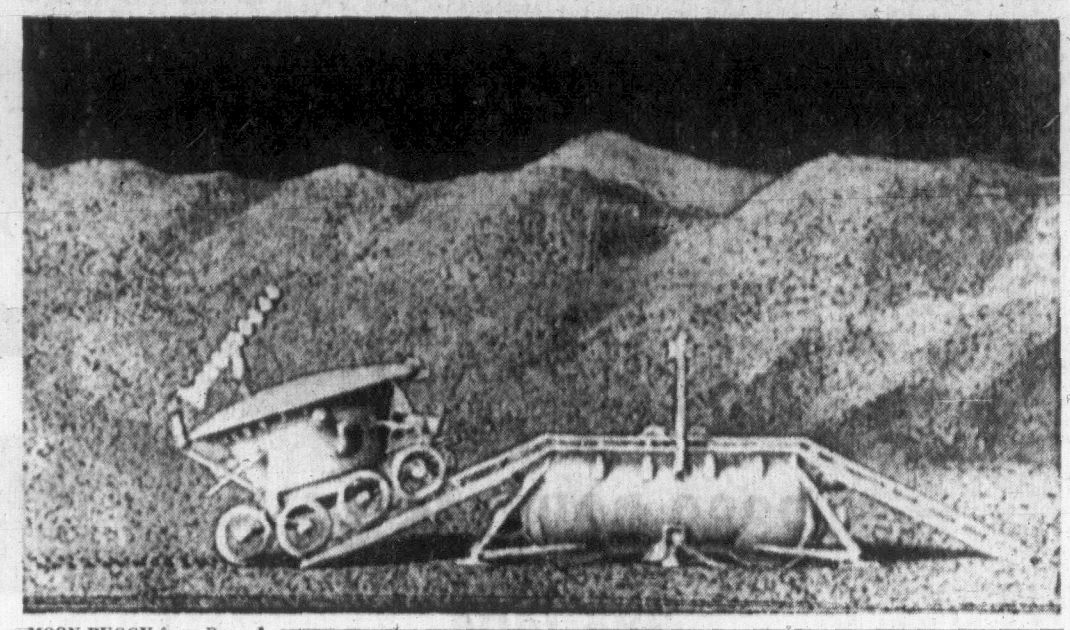

Director Heinz Kaminski of the observatory at Bochum, West Germany, who reported the Luna landing earlier, said that Luna 17 is a vastly improved version of Luna 16, which brought back the Soviet Union's first lunar sample in September.

Luna 17 was launched Nov. 11 and went into orbit around the moon Sunday, following closely the pattern set by its predecessor, Luna 16.

Luna 16 scored two moon firsts for the Soviet Union, both by scooping out lunar soil automatically and launching a capsule containing the precious moondust on its way back to earth.

A sample of the dust went on public display for the first time Monday at Moscow's exhibition of economic achievements. It looks like grey gunpowder in its glass case, but, viewed through a magnifying glass propped beside it, it looks more like clay.

MOON BUGGY from Russia made a successful soft landing on the moon, announced Tass, the Soviet news agency. An artist with the agency depicts the self-propelled lunar module as eight-wheeled and says it has conducted experiments 65 feet from the mother ship. The buggy is controlled from Russia.

Dead Estimated Up to 500,000

DACCA (CP) — Cholera spread today among hungry, homeless survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that devastated heavily populated islands at the mouth of the Ganges River and stretches of the East Pakistani coast behind them.

Estimates of the total casualties were still only guesses, although some relief officials said Monday night that the count of the dead had reached 55,000. Information Secretary Syed Ahmed spoke of possibly "300,000 or 500,000" dead, adding that such numbers were not confirmed.

Cholera, a disease endemic to the area, was reported spreading on Hatia, one of the stricken islands in the Ganges Delta cyclone alley. Three ships sent there with medical supplies were waiting for swift currents to subside so they could land their cargo.

Officials feared a widespread epidemic due to polluted water and the destruction of sanitation facilities.

A health department spokesman said nearly one million doses of anti-cholera vaccine had been sent to the area with a large shipment of safe drinking water.

OUTLINES AREA

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman said the storm early Friday hit an area of 2,388 square miles in five districts with 2.2 million people. Casualty reports still were unobtainable from many areas because of ruined communication facilities, he said.

The commissioner himself put the official death toll at 32,771 with more that 2,000 known to be missing. But he admitted the survey was by no means complete.

'Bodies Rotting On Beach'

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

MANPURA, Bay of Bengal (AP) — Human bodies mingled with the carcasses of cattle today rotting together on a beach of this stricken island in the heart of the East Pakistan cyclone disaster area.

Survivors begged for water and food as the first visitors from the outside arrived here since a tidal wave washed at least 10,000 of the island's 26,000 population to their deaths.

Survivors in damp skirtlike wraparounds clutched the hands of visitors and in one instance bent to kiss their feet. They wanted food that was not spoiled and water not drawn from pools polluted with the bodies of men and animals.

POLICE CHECK HOUSES

FLQ Note Probed

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are investigating today the authenticity and contents of another note purported to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The note, received Monday by French-language radio station CKAC, was immediately turned over to police. A CKAC spokesman declined comment on the contents of the note and said it was not broadcast by the station.

A police spokesman said that the note, signed by the Louis Riel cell, was being examined by technical experts. He did not divulge the contents.

Meanwhile, director Maurice St. Pierre of the provincial police ordered officers from 16 suburban municipalities on the western part of Montreal Island to make house-to-house calls in their respective areas.

One police chief said the men were told to check out vacant houses and recently occupied houses.

Ottawa To Resist U.S. Demands

WASHINGTON (CP) —President Nixon has served notice his administration will renew its demand that the five-year U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement be revised to eliminate provisions favoring Canada.

But officials in Ottawa said Monday Canada will continue to resist the American demands.

In his annual report to Congress on the agreement, Nixon says the continuation of the portions of the 1965 pact favoring Canada "would be contrary to the premise on which the United States entered the agreement, namely that market forces would be allowed to determine the most economic pattern of investment production and trade."

At issue between the two countries is Annex A of the agreement, under which the Canadian auto industry received special transitional arrangements which Nixon noted would continue "until its smaller industry could adjust operations to the much larger North American market."

Under this proviso, Canada gives duty-free treatment to motor vehicles and original equipment only when imported by qualified manufacturers. These manufacturers

BILL WOULD DULL 'WATCHDOG'S' TEETH

Times News Services

OTAWA — Legislation was introduced into the Commons Monday which would limit activities of Canada's auditor-general.

The legislation enables the government to criticize the auditor-general, watchdog over federal spending, after he publishes his annual report on "fraud, default or mistake" in federal accounts.

The new bill was presented in the name of C. M. Drury, treasury board president.

★ ★ ★

After Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson issued his latest critical report last spring, Drury and several other ministers responded with what many took as criticism.

The legislation also authorizes the government to publish its own observations on the findings of the auditor-general's office at the same time as the annual audit.

Three months' notice would have to be given the government concerning the contents of the auditor-general's report.

POLICE CHARGE 30 IN DRUG NET

Local police and the RCMP launched a roundup of people charged with drug offences this morning.

Thirty people had been charged by noon and 16 of them were under arrest.

RCMP Staff Sgt. William Murdoch said the charges, mostly for trafficking, involved heroin as well as the so-called soft drugs, marijuana, hashish and LSD.

Murdoch said the drug raids were a co-ordinated effort, under way simultaneously on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

Locally, Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt police worked with the RCMP and began making arrests at 8 a.m.

A number of the people charged were expected to appear in Victoria provincial court later today.

Liberals Gain In Byelections

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The youth vote appeared to have little effect on the outcome of three federal byelections Monday as the Liberals improved their standing in the Commons by one seat.

Leopold Corriveau took the Quebec riding of Frontenac from the Creditistes for the Liberals while Maurice Dupras held Labelle for the Liberals and Jack Murta retained the Manitoba riding of Lisgar for the Progressive Conservatives.

The Liberals now have 154 Commons seats to 73 for the Conservatives, 23 for the NDP and 13 for the Creditistes. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux sits as independent member for Stormont-Dundas and brings the Commons total to 264 seats.

TOTAL VOTE FALLS

It was the first time 18 to 20-year-olds could vote federally and they boosted the number of eligible voters in each riding—15 per cent to 38,608 in Frontenac, 14 per cent to 47,000 in Labelle and seven per cent to 34,000 in Lisgar.

Despite this the total vote in all three ridings fell from returns in the 1968 general election.

In Frontenac the total vote fell to 23,531 from 26,902, in Labelle to 20,961 from 29,867 and in Lisgar to 19,516 from 23,497.

It is the first time the House has been full since Ed Schreyer resigned his NDP seat to lead the party to power in Manitoba in June, 1969.

Arab Approval Given Syria Coup

By The Associated Press

Egypt, Libya and Sudan endorsed today Gen. Hafez Assad's coup in Syria and said they are ready to admit Syria as a fourth partner in their projected federation.

Libya's head of state, Col. Muammar Kadafi, made the declaration on behalf of the three Arab countries after a 24-hour visit to Damascus, Syria's capital.

His statement was broadcast by the state-controlled Damascus radio.

Egypt and Syria were linked in the United Arab Republic in 1958 but it collapsed in three years.

In an earlier broadcast, Assad said the planned federation has "rekindled the hopes of the Arab masses in an early Arab unity."

Assad, Syria's defence minister and the leader of the ruling Baath Socialist party's military wing, Friday ousted President Noureddin Atassi and arrested Atassi and Maj.-Gen. Salah Jadid.

A coup by the army preceded Syria's withdrawal in September, 1961, from the United Arab Republic, the effort by the late President Nasser to unify the Arab nations. At its height, the alliance included only Syria, Egypt and Yemen, and Nasser broke it up after Syria withdrew.

Assad announced Monday he had formed a provisional Baath command to rule until a party congress selects a new permanent leadership. His government will form a coalition with other leftist political organizations in Syria, he said, and there were reports that pro-Egyptian parties, banned under Jadid, would be asked to join the coalition.

KGB PLOT?

By VICTOR ZORZA
(Special to the Times)

LONDON (NANA) — The mysterious appearance in the West of Nikita Khrushchev's "reminiscences" looks like a move in a deep-laid psychological warfare plot hatched in the Kremlin. The linking of the name of Victor Louis with the transmission of the Khrushchev material to Time-Life means that the Soviet government, whose servant Louis is, has had a hand in the affair.

There is a pattern in all this activity which suggests that the KGB's "Department D" (for disinformation) is building up step by step a network of contacts and arrangements which would enable it to command the use of the West's massive publicity media for some special purpose of its own.

Any similarity between all this and an international spy thriller is not purely coincidental.

Victor Louis has often figured as the hero of such tales in situations which were not at all fictional.

Louis, a Soviet citizen residing in Moscow, also acts as a correspondent for Western newspapers. This enable him to undertake frequent foreign travels during which he has performed important if unorthodox duties for the Soviet foreign ministry in countries where Russia has no formal representation—as, for instance, in Spain and Formosa.

Earlier this month, he was in Kuwait, and has since then been reported in Fiji.

Louis and several men from Time-Life are reported in the Danish press to have stayed at the Hotel d'Angleterre in Copenhagen at the end of August, when the Khrushchev deal was apparently negotiated. His non-journalistic functions have often been mentioned in the world press.

The New York Times once said, in a biographical note, that Victor Louis was "a Soviet citizen believed to have close connection with the Soviet secret police." He had carried out in the past "special tasks" in the field of foreign propaganda—"apparently at the behest of the Soviet KGB, or secret police, of the Soviet foreign office, or both."

As far back as August 1967, the "New York Times"

The Pakistani press, working on figures from independent news sources, generally agree the death toll is in the vicinity of 300,000.

More that 235,000 houses were destroyed with half as many again damaged in the river-laced delta region torn apart four days ago, Anisuzzaman said.

Anisuzzaman, when asked about reports that the death toll was six to eight times higher than he had issued, stressed he could only relay the verified figures he had.

PRESIDENT MAKES TOUR

President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan and a group of reporters flew over the area for more than two hours Monday.

The rice crop, always insufficient for the area's dense population of 600 persons a square mile, was destroyed on Hatia, the neighboring island of Bhola and the mainland. The government estimated that 250,000 tons — two per cent of East Pakistan's annual harvest — was destroyed.

Bodies were buried in mass graves. Survivors wandered about on high ground. Brackish water stood in the rice fields, stained red by the blood of cattle flung about by the 150-mile winds and 20-foot waves characteristic of Bay of Bengal cyclones. Such storms are called hurricanes in the Atlantic and Caribbean and typhoons in the Pacific.

Some survivors were dragging the bloated carcasses of cattle to burial pits. A few human bodies lay in the rice paddies, still unexplored by the survivors because of the standing water.

On southern Bhola, a few homemade boats could be seen, little bigger than canoes, carrying people to a beach that had no vegetation. Live cattle stood in little clusters, awaiting the death that would come because they had no food.

HOUSES GONE

Muddy outlines of house foundations remained as the memorial to a village, gone as if sucked up by a huge vacuum cleaner.

There was no life aboard a coastal freighter of about 500 tons, sitting 50 yards inland on a tiny island between Hatia and Bhola. There was little movement in southern Bhola and the other areas hit hardest.

In northern Bhola, where the island's biggest towns are, flood waters were more widespread than in the south but more life was visible. A number of people could be seen in the town of Bhola, along with the only bridge that the aerial observers saw standing and the only vehicle seen during the tour, a bright red truck.

The devastating cyclones from off the bay are a semi-annual fact of life, coming every spring and fall with hundreds and thousands drowned and widespread destruction.

Anisuzzman said $2.7 million was released by Karachi for relief and another $46 million was set aside. He said the army has been mobilized, and the United States has been asked to provide helicopters.

The relief commissioner said aid also is coming from Switzerland, West Germany and Britain. About $70,000 worth of supplies donated by the British government was loaded aboard RAF planes in Singapore.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Sharp said Canada is making a $50,000 gift to a special Red Cross fund to aid victims of the disaster. The Canadian government also has asked Pakistan what additional aid Canada could give.

More than 50 doctors now are in the stricken area and 13 others are on the way. The total strength of medical teams helping the doctors numbers about 500.

The food position apparently is not extremely desperate in several areas because local supply depots stocked with grain, rice, salt and sugar were not damaged.

Engineers End Strike At Hospitals

Operating engineers ended their week-long strike at 16 B.C. hospitals Monday afternoon, winning a new contract which gives them $100 a month more over 21 months.

Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals were among those picketed by the men who operate the steam plants. The strike, which followed months of unsuccessful bargaining, did not inhibit patient care or produce the compulsory arbitration the government threatened if it had.

All told, 138 members of the International Union of Operating Engineers were involved at 28 hospitals in the province. Hours of work and rates of pay were the two main issues.

The strike ended when the B.C. Hospitals Association approved Monday the settlement worked out last week and approved by the engineers Friday.

The engineers won a reduction in the work week from 40 to 37½ hours, matching other hospital employees, effective Dec. 1.

Second class engineers will receive $898.75 monthly, retroactive to April 1 this year and a further increase to $938.75 next April 1.

This represents increments of $60 and $40. The other two classes of engineer get $75-$25 increments.

Third class engineers will receive $809.25, retroactive to April 1, and will move to $834.25 next April 1.

Fourth-class engineers, the majority group in the contract, will get $705.75 retroactive to April 1 and move to $730.75 next April 1.

Vendetta Erupts in IRA Ranks

BELFAST (AP) — The daylight assassination of two Roman Catholics led police to assert today that a gunmen's vendetta has erupted inside the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The victims were Arthur McKenna and Alex McVicker, both 35. McKenna was the father of six children, McVicker of five.

They were shot down by a man in a black hat in the street near their homes in Belfast's Ballymurphy housing development, a mainly Catholic area which has been the scene of repeated riots during the last year.

Despite denials from both rival wings of the I.R.A., police said the killings had the hallmark of an I.R.A. "execution." A 10-year-old boy who saw the shootings said the killer escaped in a small panel truck driven by an accomplice.

The I.R.A. and its political front, Sinn Fein (Ourselves Alone), split into two factions earlier this year, the Reds and the Greens.

The Reds, who still control the Sinn Fein party apparatus and are sometimes called the "officials," are largely orthodox Marxists demanding a Communist revolution both in Northern Ireland and the neighboring Irish Republic.

The Greens, otherwise known as "provisionals," are closer to the traditional I.R.A. line of anti-British nationalism.

They advocate guerrilla war against the British troops, who since last August have held the peace line between Northern Ireland's pro-republican Catholics and the anti-republican Protestant majority.

Tension between Reds and Greens took a sharp turn upward after a shooting attempt this month on Cathal Goulding, the Dublin house painter who is chief of staff of the Reds.

It was further aggravated by the arrest in the republic of 23 northern Greens who had allegedly gone over the border for arms training.

Eight of the northerners were jailed Monday for a month in Dublin, the republican capital, after refusing to pay fines of £50 ($50) on charges of illegal possession of arms.

Fifteen others are due in court Wednesday on similar charges.

Both the Green and Red sides of the I.R.A. denied that any of their members was involved in the Belfast shootings either as executioner or victim. A police spokesman said, however: "As far as we are concerned it is an internal I.R.A. quarrel."

Oranges on Way

The German Core Line's M.S. Anonacore will arrive at Ogden Point next Tuesday with Victoria's first direct shipment of Japanese Mandarin oranges this year.

She will unload 34,560 bundles before heading for Vancouver to discharge the rest of her cargo.

Ore Trucks Must Get Emergency Steering

Operators of large ore trucks used in mining in B.C. have been ordered by the province to install emergency steering and a third brake system to prevent accidents.

A few accidents have been blamed on steering failures in front-end loaders, a mines department official said., and one man was injured at the Brenda mine near Peachland because of brake failure.

Twenty-two 100-ton electric dump trucks at Brenda and Kaiser Resources Ltd. mines were "not considered fully acceptable" because of the absence of a mechanical parking brake.

The trucks now have both an electric braking system and an emergency brake operated by air pressure. The third brake would eliminate the "100-to-1" chance" of an accident if both other systems failed.

Front-end loaders and other mining vehicles subject to steering failure habe been ordered to find a satisfactory method of providing emergency steering.

talk to as many residents as possible," he said.

"Citizens often see suspicious people or strange goings-on but they don't always call police," he added.

Jacques Geoffroy, 23, and his 22-year-old wife, Ginette, were arraigned in Montreal Monday on charges of being FLQ members. Bail was refused in both cases.

Geoffroy is the younger brother of Pierre-Paul Geoffroy, who is serving a life sentence on more than 30 charges related to FLQ bombing incidents dating back to 1968-69.

When asked to plead, Geoffroy yelled:

"I don't recognize this jury."

"You'll all have your trials some day."

"Just plead guilty or not guilty."

Geoffroy then became quiet and Mr. Justice Albert Leblanc ordered the court clerk to enter a plea of not guilty.

Mrs. Geoffroy pleaded not guilty.

Trial date for the accused was set over to the January assizes.

Luna 16 touched down in the Sea of Fertility Sept. 20 and sat there for 26 hours, scooping up samples before rocketing back toward the earth.

After Luna 17 went into moon orbit Sunday, Tass reported it was circling once every hour and 56 minutes, riding a little more than 50 miles above the lunar surface.

Tass aid only that the moon probe was in constant radio communication with earth and that monitoring equipment showed all systems on board were functioning correctly.

Luna 17 is the third Russian moon trip in little more than two months. Luna 16 carried out its automated mission in September. During October, the Soviets sent Zond VIII whirling around the moon on a photographic trip which climaxed in an Indian Ocean splashdown.

Luna 16 touched down in the Sea of Fertility nearer the eastern edge of the visible side of the moon than previous lunar shots.

The two American manned mooncraft brought back samples of soil from the Ocean of Storms and the Sea of Tranquility.

The American samples were much bigger than that sent back to earth by Luna 16. The Russian samples weighed 3½ ounces but Soviet scientists say it was enough to work on.

They turned down offers of 500-rupee notes, more money than an East Pakistani farmer sees in a year.

He was one of the richest men on this island of about 40 square miles between the larger Bay of Bengal islands of Hatia and Bhola, where Friday's storm swept away a still uncounted, but estimated tens of thousands of islanders.

MUCH HELP NEEDED

"We are not beggars," he said through parched lips. "We feel shy to ask for help but what can we do?

"We're eating rotten rice which has fallen into our ponds, collecting it and drying it. We are not cooking it in our pond water. It gives a bad smell. We burn rotten rice and eat it.

"In the southern part of the island there are people who have died because they have no food."

He and other islanders said journalists in a seaplane were the first outsiders to visit the island. No relief has come to this island typical of dozens of offshore islands not yet reached by the slowly growing relief effort.

Kamaluddin said the tidal wave swept away at least 10,000 people. He said of the 5,000 houses on the island just four remain intact. Food is rotting, water is foul, the only fire comes from a cigarette lighter as nobody has matches.

They burn dried straw and the remains of their ruined paddy crop.

"About 80 per cent of the small children, and about 100 per cent of the babies were washed away." He said: "We need food, medical relief, vaccination. We have no food, no cattle, nothing."

are required to maintain at least the same ratio of production of vehicles in Canada to sales in Canada as prevailed during the 1964 model year.

In his report, released last week while the president was taking a post-election vacation in Florida, Nixon said:

"The continued existence of the transitional measures . . . represents an unnecessary burden on the automotive industry and is an obstacle to full realization of the agreement's objectives."

In Ottawa, however, Canadian officials say that although they expected the renewed American move to revise the pact, Ottawa is no more ready to give way than it was last year.

Canada says the safeguards guaranteeing the Canadian industry a minimum share of production must be retained—even though the minimum provisions have been surpassed.

The officials say the terms which bend the agreement in Canada's favor are needed in case of any future major slump in the auto industry to ensure a fair share of output is retained in Canada.

The trade agreement is expected to be discussed at the annual U.S.-Canadian ministerial talks being held in Ottawa next Monday and Tuesday.

Sooke Teachers Sign Pact

Sooke school trustees and teachers have agreed on a 1971 contract that will give the teachers a 7.7 per cent wage increase.

A spokesman for the school board said the new agreement, which was reached Monday afternoon, will give the 270 Sooke teachers "slightly more than Victoria."

School board chairman Howard Drummond said it was the first time in the four years he has been a trustee agreement has been reached without the use of an arbitration board.

Greater Victoria teachers will vote Wednesday to ratify or reject an agreement reached by negotiators Saturday.

...Khrushchev Memoirs 'Plot Hatched by Kremlin'

reported that "Western intelligence services have long suspected Louis as an agent of the KGB."

At the same time, "Newsweek" described him as an agent of a KGB department "used by the Soviet government to pipe expedient information towards the West."

In the Italina "Corriere Della Sera," the paper's former Moscow correspondent, who had known Louis for a number of years, described his "privileged position" in the Soviet capital in an article titled "half journalist, half KGB spy."

Perhaps the most widely known psychological warfare operation in which Louis has been previously engaged concerned the memoirs of Svetlana Stalin. The Kremlin professed to believe that she had been spirited out of Russia by the CIA, in order that the publication of her memoirs in the West might be used to put in the shade the impending 50th anniversary of the Soviet revolution. It therefore sought to anticipate the impact of publication by sending Victor Louis out to the West, with copies of the manuscript which the KGB had somehow acquired, in order to place them in the hands of Western publishers and magazines some time before the anniversary celebrations.

The credibility of Victor Louis as a purveyor of this kind of material had been established by his role in making available to the West a filmed interview of Khrushchev's reminiscences.

The truth of that operation (never before fully published) is that the well-known American television producer, Mrs. Lucy Jarvis, was approached by Victor Louis during a visit to Moscow, and he offered to procure for her a filmed interview with Krushchev. Louis was then invited to New York to discuss the arrangements with the National Broadcasting Company (NBC). He asked for a fee of $25,000 and for the cameras and tape recorders which were to be used in making the film.

★ ★ ★

It so happened that Pierre Salinger, the White House press secretary during the Kennedy and early Johnson years, had for some time been trying to obtain Khrushchev's views on his dealings with President Kennedy, to form part of the Kennedy Memorial Library. When NBC came to consider the questions which should be put to Khrushchev, it was decided that these should be drawn up by Pierre Salinger.

Salinger insisted on some proof that the Khrushchev interview would be made genuinely in response to his questions, and that he—and NPC—would not be presented with some clever fake. Louis flew from New York to Los Angeles, to discuss the whole matter with Salinger and he undertook to provide the required proof.

Salinger gave him a copy of his recently published book about President Kennedy, and it was agreed that Khrushchev should be shown in the film handling the book during the interview. Louis was given a $5,000 advance and the film cameras and recorders he had asked for. He went back to Moscow and soon delivered the film, which became a worldwide television scoop. (It included a shot of Khrushchev with the book.)

But the intended pay-off was not the remaining $20,000 which Louis duly got, but yet another television film which he wanted NBC to show to the American public and to distribute throughout the world. This was a one-hour film designed to show up Svelana's supposed perfidy. It was to include interviews with her children in Moscow, who would, of course, say what the KGB wanted them to say about their mother. NBC refused the film.

At least part of the Khrushchev material now made available to Time-Life appears to be an extended version of the recording Louis had made previously and had then passed on to NBC.

The earlier recording was abruptly cut off at a number of critical points of the narrative. These cuts have now been made good. There is not likely to be any question about the authenticity of this part of the material, if the recordings can be checked. But a Time-Life spokesman has also said that the reminiscences are made up of material "emanating from various sources," and this would have to be judged on its merits when it is published.

Another KGB operation in which Victor Louis played a prominent part was the exchange of Gerald Brook, the British teacher arrested in Moscow, for the Korgers, husband and wife, the two top Soviet spies held in Britain.

When all the efforts made by the KGB over a number of years to force Britain to exchange them had failed, Victor Louis was brought into the act. He sent out a story, in his capacity as the Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News, which ultimately led to the deal which the KGB wanted.

The story made it clear that, if no exchange was arranged, Brook, who was nearing the end of his sentence for distributing anti-Soviet propaganda material, would be retried as a spy and given a further and stiffer sentence. It was also made clear that he was so seriously ill that he might not survive a further term of imprisonment.

The story was used as the basis of a campaign designed to play on the heartstrings of the British people in order to obtain the release of the Krogers—and it succeeded.

These are only some of the manifold services performed by Louis for the KGB in the field of Western mass communication media. The placing of the Khrushchev reminiscences—whether wholly genuine or not—in the hands of Time-Life for worldwide publication is part of the same pattern.

The KGB is acquiring, through Louis, the experience of negotiating and bargaining with Western mass media organizations. It is learning how to manipulate them for its own purposes. It is finding out what the right channels are, who are the people to approach, what are the rewards and the temptations to which such people respond, how to play them off against each other, and how best to handle them.

The publication of the Khrushchev reminiscences, already assured of perhaps the widest magazine and book audience in the Western world, looks like a dry run for some more ambitious psychological warfare operation.

This, it may be surmised, will be designed to make use of the world-wide television and publication networks to place before the Western public some great "scoop" so tempting that the mass media will be unable to resist it, irrespective of whether th material is genuine or not, and regardless of any harm such publication might do to the interests of the West, of its alliances, its governments, or its nations.

The men who run Time-Life are obviously too experienced and sophisticated to lend themselves to any such scheme. NBC refused, after all, to use the Svetlana film. But some of the most widely read publications in leading Western countries did publish some of the Svetlana material given to them by Louis.

The Western press has also published, on occasion, "secret" documents, provided through various channels by the KGB's "Department D," which were designed to embarrass Western governments and to damage relations between them.

Some of the documents were forgeries, others might have been stolen by Soviet spies in the West.

When "Department D" has another big "scoop" to offer—much bigger, perhaps, than anything it has attempted so far—it will be able to use the competitive instincts of the Western publishing world to good advantage.

Even if Time-Life should decline the offer, the KGB middleman could still go to its competitors, who, aware of the "scoops" acquired by Time-Life through such channels in the past, may be only too willing to outdo their rival.

Tap Water In 24 Towns 'Dangerous'

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — Tap water in many parts of Britain contains poisonous chemicals and sometimes such substances are present in dangerously high quantities, say two scientists at the University of Liverpool.

Reporting the results of a survey they undertook in 24 towns and country boroughs, the scientists said many chemicals pass through purification plants undetected.

They called on the government for an investigation of the water supply and alleged that authorities have displayed a casual attitude towards what the scientists term an increasingly dangerous situation.

J. A. Tolley and C. D. Reed, both of the university's engineering department, reported that in one area covered by their survey cyanide was in the water supply to a degree well above the recommended maximum and without the knowledge of the water authority.

Tolley said random samples from the surveyed communities, with a total population of seven million, all contained more than 16 times the maximum amount of phenolic substances per litre recommended by the World Health Organization.

A group of 22 towns had the maximum or more of lead and three had more than twice the limit.

Commenting on the survey Sunday night, Graham Page, minister of local government, said Britain's water standards are higher than those recommended by the World Health Organization.

Welcome Reassurance

CONSERVATION MINISTER Kiernan's quoted remark last week about the possibility of exporting water to the United States was perhaps meant in a very long-range and theoretical context. He suggested that the time might come when, the United States having made total use of its fresh water, it would be morally wrong for Canada to refuse to sell its neighbor further supplies. But it is reassuring in any case to hear Premier Bennett give a plain, terse "no" to follow-up queries on this score.

British Columbia, Mr. Bennett indicates, will not change its present policy of refusing to export water to the United States, now or in the future. This is in line with the attitude of the Canadian people that Canadian fresh water resources have not yet been fully assessed, nor has the future potential need of Canada been estimated. If at some future date the latter is found to be smaller than the former, then the question of water exports might be considered. But judging by the experience of the United States, and the inevitable needs of a vastly greater Canadian population in the decades ahead, the likelihood of an exportable surplus of this vitally essential natural resource is infinitely remote.

It would be welcome confirmation to hear federal Energy and Resources Minister Greene and other national government leaders being equally emphatic about Canadian water exports. Diplomatic manoeuvres on the fringes of the continental concept, whereby North America's natural resources would be supplied to the areas of greatest demand irrespective of country, are not conducive to public confidence. For the fallacy of the continental approach, so far as this country is concerned, is that Canada would be fated to remain a relatively static storehouse of natural resources for the industry of the United States.

That is a subsidiary role which falls far short of what Canada should aspire to achieve. It will be difficult enough, living next to a giant with endless ingenuity and sophisticated skills and with almost unlimted funds for foreign investment, for us to maintain our economic and political identity over the years ahead. It will prove almost impossible if we enter into a bilateral association of resources with a partner who enjoys such a technological and productive lead. And the final, irreplaceable resource, to be compared with air as a vital requirement for individual and national life, is pure water.

Winning the Battle for Minds

AFTER SEVEN YEARS' ACTIVE campaigning for environmental improvement and conservation, Britain's "Countryside in 1970" movement has disbanded, confident that it has made substantial headway. Some critics have questioned the assumption of success, asking for visible proof of improvement.

They draw rebuttal from Mr. E. Max Nicholson, former head of the Nature Conservancy and a veteran conservationist. He argues that the battle for the environment is a battle for men's minds and that growth of a strong, informed, aroused public opinion proves the victory.

"Countryside in 1970" has accomplished what many other movements of a comparable nature have achieved. It has brought together numbers of citizens who, a decade or so ago, had scarcely given the issue a passing thought.

The claim made by the British organization finds a counterpart locally in the public support given to the campaign to release water into Goldstream to save a run of salmon. This is by no means the first year in which that stream's run has been threatened at spawning time. On other occasions the few voices raised in pleas for more water made a thin chorus. This year, thanks to the increasing conservation consciousness of our people, the chorus was loud and clear.

The awareness of the need to protect and improve the environment is one of the sturdy growths of the last 10 years. Without that awareness, and broad public support for the action that must be taken, conservation could remain an academic issue of limited practical application — until too late.

And Now Hong Kong Bilingualism

THE BILINGUAL ISSUE WHICH has troubled Canada and led to riots in Belgium and other countries, has moved now to Hong Kong. There the debate concerns the desirability of making Chinese the official tongue rather than English.

Two factors emerge from the debate in Hong Kong: At this point there is no official language; English has for years been the language of officialdom, while Chinese has been used for many official notices and transactions. Beyond that, the drive to make Chinese the official language bumps into a peculiarly Chinese obstacle: should the tongue be Cantonese, in widespread use throughout the colony, or the more scholarly Mandarin?

English, say its protagonists, is an international language. Chinese in its various forms, its supporters reply, is the language of one-quarter of the world's population.

Whether the point at issue is a matter of prestige, protection of a culture or an economic consideration, one significant fact emerges for anglophones: far too many of them remain unilingual in a world where nationalism prompts millions to insist on communication in some other tongue.

Unanswered Question

THE NEWS RELEASE CIRCULated by the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission at the close of its annual meeting in Tokyo this month underscored again a major difficulty encountered by the three signatory nations in controlling — and conserving — salmon in the North Pacific. The annual meeting revealed the joint concern of represenatives from Canada, the United States and Japan over the activities of the Republic of Korea.

"There was unanimous agreement in the commission to request the member governments to take more appropriate measures to deter the operations of fishermen of the Republic of Korea," the news release stated, adding, "The commission believes that such salmon fishing operations are detrimental to the achievement of the conservation objectives of the convention."

Presumably the member governments are in a position to apply pressure to the Republic of Korea to accomplish that purpose. But since the Republic of Korea is not a signatory to the three-nation North Pacific pact, the pressure must come from areas outside the legal fisheries agreement signed by Canada, the United States and Japan.

The inevitable question arises: What happens when some other country, whose arm the pact members can't twist, comes fishing for salmon in this part of the Pacific?

ON THE BANKS OF THE GOLDSTREAM — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Human Nature in its Absurdity and Glory

IN Victoria, a town I used to know quite well, human nature has lately exhibited, with a sudden flash of revelation, all its absurdity and all its glory. As a puzzled nation must have heard by now, the local inhabitants are going short of water for their own use to save a very minor and unimportant run of salmon in a little brook near the town. The precious rainfall accumulated in the municipal reservoirs during a season of drought has been poured into the dry channel of Goldstream and the fish move to their ancient spawning pools where, having perpetuated their breed, they die immediately, according to plan.

Hutchison

For Victorians—gardeners to a man, perfectly sane in most respects but on the subject of floriculture certifiably mad—this diversion of water is a desperate gamble. Next summer's lawns, shrubs and blossoms may suffer, or die, so that the salmon may live.

Small Boys Rejoice

In the meantime housewives wash dishes and clothes by hand in preference to water-wasting machines, only shallow baths are permitted in the patriotic home, small boys escape the immemorial horror of ablution, rejoicing in their grimy patriotism, and my friend, Horace Snifkin, drinks his whisky neat and, when last seen, glowed, even reeled, with what he called innocent civic spirit. (He added, quite accurately, that the government's expensive liquor contained more than sufficient water anyhow.)

The heroic act of saving the salmon did not completely distract the Victorians from their lawful occasions elsewhere. Their automobiles and oil furnaces helped to pollute the world's atmosphere toward the point of total human destruction. Their sewers polluted the surrounding ocean. While some 30,000 people, in one day, breathlessly watched the salmon spawning, many less fortunate citizens languished in squalid rooms and attics, old, sick and forgotten by society. The Community Chest was falling far behind its yearly quota. But the salmon were doing fine.

A cynic might say that the human species was absurd, or idiotic, in its contradictions yet logical enough in its will to save another species obviously superior to its own. After all, the salmon do no harm to the world's ecology, as man does. They hatch out in some tiny puddle, swim thousands of miles into the sea and, four years later, return, by a method of guidance beyond man's knowledge, to the spot where they first came alive. By all means, says the cynic, save the salmon and let man proceed with his systematic, technological suicide.

A reasonable argument—too reasonable altogether. For in fact the glory of the human species is that, like no competitor, it can sometimes rise above reason and reach an entirely different level, thus proving that certain animals are more equal than others; or rather that man is not an animal, except in his pitiably inefficient body.

Or, if the cynic should deny a possibility now widely rejected in the more educated civilized and polluted nations, he must admit that only man, among the countless billions of living creatures on the earth, ever worries about the other species and, in a blundering fashion, tries to preserve them from his own folly.

Something Hopeful

This, at least, is something clear and hopeful in our age of chaos and despair (as Freeman King, the beloved conservationist, the civic conscience of Victoria and savior-in-chief of the salmon, would be the first to assert). And another of the earth's mysteries, as curious as the mystery of the salmon, may be worth remembering also.

The human is so oddly constructed that he can read in the paper that thousands of his fellow humans have died instantly in a distant earthquake, flood or epidemic and, after reading the news, will eat his dinner and enjoy his sleep without a moment's concern. He will yawn with boredom and turn to the dream world of television when he is told that his town's annual charity drive has failed, that old-age pensioners throughout the land and many helpless children don't get enough good food, heat and shelter.

Nevertheless, if he finds a child slightly injured on his own street, a neighbor sick next door or a salmon dying for lack of water, he will make any sacrifice to help the victim with his money, his household water supply or, if necessary, his life.

Here again the universal mother of all things knows exactly what she is doing with her assorted progeny. She knows that man would soon go finally insane and perish from pity and remorse if he could feel distant misfortunes as he feels those close to him.

But how odd a mixture of angel and demon stands, on the banks of Goldstream and beside the larger currents of history sweeping us all along, God knows where! Still, we need not entirely despair, perhaps, so long as man alone marvels at the endless odyssey of the salmon and sees that it has qualities denied to him. Yes, but sees as well that the salmon, like all non-human creatures, lacks every man's sense of wonderment and wild surmise which is his saving grace, the ultimate credential of his humanity.

FROM NEW YORK — By JAMES RESTON

Weakness in the Heroic Image

NOW that Charles de Gaulle is gone, it is clear that the remaining political managers of the world are a different breed from the heroic leaders of the last generation. Even on his way to the grave, the dead de Gaulle somehow managed to retain the gift of grace, even a glint of magic, and make the living Presidents and Prime Ministers seem rather plain.

Reston

Still, after you admire the ability of a man to direct his life and manage his death, you have to move on with due reverent haste, to an awkward question. Does heroic leadership really work? What does it leave behind? What of the weakness of greatness?

For Charles de Gaulle — for himself and his own nationalistic vision of his mission — his leadership worked. He restored the confidence of a defeated nation, and he may have established Presidential authority and political stability in his new Constitution. This is quite an achievement, but is it a model for the coming age?

Dramatic personal leadership in the post-war world has not been a great success. It is good theatre and good journalism. It is a positive and often decisive force in old defeated countries and new struggling countries for a time, but the record of the last quarter century suggests that the theatrical politicians are better at making headlines than making history.

President Nasser in Egypt came to power to create a social revolution and lift his people out of misery, but got diverted by the power of his personality into dreams of an Arab empire and the conquest of Israel, and in the end he lost his wars against Israel, his revolution to the Arab guerrillas, and his life. He was a remarkable personality, in many ways a good man, but life is too short, and charismatic leadership somehow didn't work.

Personality Not Enough

The post-war world has produced quite a few leaders who repeated their own versions of this same story of limited success. Kwame Nkrumah led Ghana to independence through the force of his personality and then overplayed his hand and was overthrown in 1966.

Norodom Sihanouk in Cambodia, Sukarno in Indonesia, Habib Bourgiba in Tunisia — all in different circumstances — dramatized the politics of personality and propaganda but have run into deep trouble. Fidel Castro has had a comparable experience: He has mastered the arts of being popular, but not the complicated problems of growing sugar cane, exporting and importing, or governing the urban and rural populations of his island.

So maybe there is something to be said for the remaining world leaders at the de Gaulle memorial service at Notre Dame in Paris who seemed such a dim and undramatic lot. In the company of mourners, we did not have the leadership symbols of a generation ago. We had Pompidou instead of de Gaulle, Richard Nixon instead of Franklin Roosevelt, Mikolai V. Podgorny instead of Stalin, Edward Heath instead of Winston Churchill.

It cannot be an accident that suddenly the world has run out of heroic leaders, and that the managers, the technicians and the bureaucrats have taken over in all the major capitals of the world.

It cannot be explained by ideology. The plain fact is that we have no spectacular personalities left like de Gaulle in world politics, no dominant philosophers or preachers, or editors or university presidents.

Last Century Symbol

De Gaulle was a 19th century symbol — self-assured, authoritarian, a believer in a world that does not believe, but believes in believing, a private man who went back to his village to die and even defied the leaders of the world to come to his grave.

In personal terms, in national terms, his life was a triumph. He dramatized the 19th-century ideal of the leader. There was never a suggestion of material or moral corruption in his personal life, but his ideal of personal leadership, glorious as it was to him and for France, does not really work in a world where individualism and nationalism are overwhelmed by the larger needs of common action to deal with common problems in the world.

What de Gaulle proved, like Nasser, Bourgiba, Sihanouk, Nkrumah, Sukarno, Castro and many others since the end of the last world war, is that personal leadership may be exciting and may work for a while, but it is not decisive. The modern problems of economics, military arms, imports, exports, unemployment, hunger, balance of payments and all the rest are too complicated to be banished by charisma, by personal magnetism and eloquence.

De Gaulle is a symbol of our regret. He fought for the nostalgic and lost world of our dreams — and therefore many people wept at his grave. But it is not an accident that the remaining mourners and leaders of the world — Nixon, Heath, Pompidou, Brezhnev, Kosygin, Brandt, Sato — seem rather dull and pedestrian. For they are dealing with the dull and pedestrian problems of the world, and it may be that in the end they will deal with these complicated and devilish problems more effectively than the heroic leaders of the past.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Back Looking

From the Times of November 17, 1910:

Rights of women was one of the predominating notes struck in the Vancouver council chamber at the special meeting of the city fathers. Contrary to the suffragette program decorating the political board in Britain no very strenuous fight was necessary for the fair ladies to carry their point . . . The charter should be amended so as to allow a married woman holding separate estate the privilege of exercising the franchise at municipal elections.

Letters

Americans and Citizenship

I note the report that in a recent city council meeting Mayor Courtney Haddock stated that he had sold an island he owned to an American and he was proud of the fact that he had made such a sale as Americans are good citizens.

I am not questioning the good mayor's right to sell his island to an American but I should like confirmation that the American to whom he sold the island actually became a citizen of Canada. If one looks at Calgary, one will find that the average American living and working in Canada does not become a Canadian citizen. However I am not doubting the fact that the average American, who lives in Canada, is a good citizen—but not a Canadian citizen.

I would like to add that I am utterly opposed to the law which allows anyone—Canadian or foreigner—to own an island or waterfrontage. I feel that such land should be for the pleasure of all and not for the chosen few who can afford the price for such property. In the countries where I lived in South America no foreigner was permitted, by law, to own property within 3 kms. (approximately two miles) of the sea coast and I strongly urge that we should enact similar legislation. If such action is not taken soon by our governments—federal and provincial—it will be too late and the choice parts of Canada, like our industry, will be in foreign hands.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1254 Rockland.

The Doctor Explains

I would like to make a correction regarding Mr. Peter McNelly's article which appeared in Nov. 5 "Times."

I said, "I could not declare Mr. Anderson psychologically unemployable. If I did so, I would have to do the same to all my patients attending the Centre. Some of my patients who are mentally disturbed and some who are even hallucinating are working and quite happy maintaining their families".

I am not happy with the choice of the word "crazy". I reacted negatively and am upset about it. I am quite sure my patients would have reacted similarly. To them I apologize most sincerely for any distress they may have been caused by the unfortunate use of this word in the article. — Arturo L. Aranas, MD., Director, Victoria Mental Health Centre.

Bus Protest

I live in Cordova Bay, and under the revised timetable the bus journey to downtown will now take one hour and five minutes, with only one bus going each way per day. Previously there were four buses serving this route, and a one-way trip took only 20 minutes. For this revised service I understand there will also be a fare increase.

These new schedules sound suspiciously like another instance of the E & N Railway syndrome—deter all passengers and then complain loudly that the service is uneconomic.

Cannot something be done about providing an adequate bus service for downtown workers, students and the elderly? How about extending B.C. Hydro route 17, through to Parker Avenue, several times a day?—(Mrs.) S. A. Round, 4731 Carlos.

The Population Slowdown

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA — In the next few months Canada will take a variety of short and long strides towards slowing its human growth rate and shaping the population's distribution.

The most noticeable changes will come from federal policies introduced at this session of Parliament — particularly by the immigration, health and welfare, and urban affairs ministeries — but provincial and local governments as well as private groups will make their contributions too.

But possibly the most important aspect of all will be in the national mood as population control and dispersion become legitimized concepts, inevitably shifting debate and research from principles to ways and means as time goes on.

Second of Two Articles

The general argument is nothing new to a public which has seen vociferous but small groups urging Ottawa to help underdeveloped countries control their population growth. What is new is the spreading debate for the same thing at home and the deepening involvement of government.

The process really began with last year's breaking of the contraceptives logjam in the Criminal Code amendment making it legal to sell birth control devises and disseminate information on their use.

After a year's agonizing with a cabinet split, the federal government took the next logical step less than a month ago with the announcement it would set up a $1 million annual program to help provincial and private agencies which have begun providing voluntary family planning assistance (Alberta so far is the pacemaker) and a similar amount would be donated to international agencies.

In the coming year this new policy should begin exerting an effect on the national fertility rate, already in slow decline from a record 3.9 children per adult female in 1957 to an estimated 2.44 last year which, however, was still enough to give Canada a natural increase of 213,000 in 1969, or more than double the net immigration gain.

(The somewhat liberalized abortion law also will reinforce the fertility decline but is not likely to become significant until further amendment — not entirely an impossibility in the foreseeable future.)

Besides native born, Canada's population has grown by 3 million immigrants since the Second World War and this area too will see some major changes in the coming year with the Throne Speech's promise of a white paper this session to rewrite immigration policy.

The last major change was made four years ago when the discriminatory quota system was replaced by the present point system under which education, health, linguistics and other criteria determine admission instead of origin.

This was one factor in substantially stepping up immigration in recent years to a near-200,000 annual rate and has made a perceptible change in pattern with Asiatic and Caribbean immigrants, many of them highly trained specialists, rising from 8 per cent to almost one-quarter of all newcomers.

Last year, there was a dip to 162,000 immigrants, almost 10 per cent from the U.S., while emigration declined slightly as well to 60,000.

Ironically, Canada's switch to a racially non-discriminatory immigration policy has been criticized recently on the grounds that it was draining the short supply of well-trained manpower from developing countries while only making it harder for Canadian graduates to find jobs.

The other criticism aimed at immigration is that more than three-quarters of the arrivals wind up in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver where congestion problems are greatest.

Whether or not either of these aspects are dealt with in the impending white paper, Manpower and Immigration Minister Otto Lang makes it clear that immigration policy must be shaped to fit neatly into the total Canadian picture as never before.

■

Both Lang and the Environmental Affairs Minister-designate Jack Davis say they doubt very much that the time has yet come for Canada to stabilize population at current levels.

"I think protection of the environment is of critical importance and has not had enough attention but I doubt that family planning is going to avoid pollution," Lang said.

"I haven't noticed that smaller families pollute any less than larger ones because they tend to consume as much by using up their extra income."

Davis said the theory of an absolute relationship between numbers and environmental damage — both through resource consumption and waste production — has yet to be proven.

"We've only begun to attack the pollution problem and I'm convinced we can cause it to 'plateau' in this decade and then make it decline," he said.

"I agree that having a national debate to reach a consensus on an optimum population is worthwhile but I doubt that our particular answer lies in any marked reduction in our birth rate, over the next decade anyway. Immigration is another matter though and should be looked at closely."

Davis said when his proposed National Environmental Council is set up it undoubtedly will look at the population's impact on environment "but not as the first priority — it'll be somewhere down the road, maybe third or fourth priority."

The Mark Of Civilized Country

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

In Kitchener last week a 21-year-old man who had pleaded guilty to manslaughter in a fatal stabbing after a prolonged drinking bout was sentenced to 10 years in jail.

Mr. Justice Patrick Hartt, who passed the sentence, told the accused, "I personally can see no benefit to anyone in sending you to penitentiary for a long term, but under the prevailing theories of sentencing I have no choice. I intend to write to the National Parole Board and indicate my views in the hope that you will soon be returned, under some degree of control, to society to carry on what I hope will be a reasonable and worthwhile life."

★ ★ ★

The accused, said Mr. Justice Hartt, had been "reared in abject poverty, subjected to extreme abuse from an alcoholic father and forced into fending for yourself at a time when you were in fact, still a child (14 years of age)".

His first offence of record occurred at the age of 16. "The society that now demands vengeance as punishment for your crime must at the same time be prepared to accept a large measure of the responsibility for the fact that you are here today. Self-righteous indignation is completely inappropriate in the light of the shameful neglect of the past."

We admire Mr. Justice Hartt's compassion. Yet is swift release for such a prisoner the real answer?

It is not a matter of crying out for revenge. It is that, no matter whose fault it was, a misfit has been created; one who, when he drinks, becomes a danger to others. The big task is to make the misfit over, so that he becomes fit for absorption into society.

At this point, unfortunately, Mr. Justice Hartt runs again into the negligence of that society.

Where can he send the convicted man, knowing that he will there receive the psychiatric and rehabilitative treatment which is necessary to his cure?

There is not a judge in the country who would not acknowledge, month in and month out, that sending people to jails, as the jails now function, will do more to exacerbate than to correct the emotional and mental disturbances that lie on the periphery of insanity and produce crimes of violence.

The prisons are so ill equipped to treat such cases, in fact, that there are lawyers who plead that their clients are criminally insane, so that they may at least be sure that they will be sent to a hospital for the criminally insane, and so receive treatment.

But it is not only the prisons that are at fault. Where, at any point in the business of creating a criminal, does our society step in effectively to reverse the process?

★ ★ ★

The young man appearing before Mr. Justice Hartt had been abused in childhood and thrown out of his home at the age of 14.

How effectively do school and child welfare services function to detect such conditions and provide protection for the child?

And if detected, how well does the foster home system serve children suffering from emotional bruising and disturbance?

Juvenile court authorities admit that far too many children are sent to training schools simply because there are few proper alternatives.

How effective is the post-prison treatment of offenders? T. G. George Street, chairman of the National Parole Board, says that Canada's prison population could be halved within 10 years if we took the proper measures — greater emphasis on probation, parole, detention homes and the use of indeterminate sentences.

At each stage we fail, and why? Because there are too few skilled people willing to tackle the job. Because we will not pay the costs of doing the job and cannot see that it could well be more expensive, in the long run, not to do it. Because the prisoner, not having a vote, is politically unimportant.

Because it takes a highly civilized country to realize that measures to prevent crime serve the whole of society better than measures to avenge crime; and Canada has not yet reached this stage of civilization.

Keeping the Global Village From Becoming Global Prison

By NORMAN COUSINS
Saturday Review

The significance of communications has seldom been more pithily expressed than in Aristotle's comment that the size of a political unit is determined by the range of a single man's voice. He was thinking of the Greek world, of course, where all the citizens of a city-state such as Athens could assemble in one place and tend to their common affairs.

According to this yardstick, the entire world today is a potential single community; there is no part of the globe that is not within range of a single man's voice. Hence the ultimate significance of the marriage of electronics to words is that it sets a stage for government on a world scale.

Sets the Stage

The fundamental questions that now have to be asked are: What kinds of forces will shape it? What will be the philosophy behind it? Will it ennoble or diminish the individual?

The prospects of world management are both magnificent and terrifying. The same mechanism that can bring words of sanity and inspiration to virtually every part of the planet can also carry messages intended to manipulate the species.

The same technological miracles that can create a global village can create an authoritarian arena. The same electronic instruments that can provide an educational upsurge never before known by humankind can impose a stifling uniformity on the collective intelligence.

Computers can emancipate man from drudgery or they can make him a numbered unit; they can record not just his vital statistics but his ideas and politics. Satellites cruising through space can activate picture machines in his home that can either entertain or mesmerize.

In short, man can reach his highest development or can slide into an age of depersonalization.

The fiendish possibilities are becoming less hypothetical all the time. The very fact that the means exist or can be devised for the total control of man by man exerts a prodigious force toward that end. Folly has only to be recognized to become irresistible.

It would be simple enough to avert a terrible downturn in the human condition if all that was involved here were the need for people to register a choice.

But the issue here is not likely to be resolved just by a general world consensus against darkness and for light.

If the global village is not to become a global prison, much work has to be done. The ability of humans to put disparate pieces together will have to be tested as never before.

To a sense of history will have to be added a painstaking attention to all the details required for the building of a world society safe and fit for man.

Come by Drift

For the wrong kind of world government will surely come about by drift if the right kind is not created by design. Man's machines and his cathode tubes will overtake him unless he assiduously creates the specific institutions that can provide responsible controls.

Creating an authoritarian society requires no triumph of the intelligence. Cunning, yes, and a great deal of force; but not systematic knowledge or respect for its members.

A single man, riding the crest of power, can sometimes fashion a state as an extension of his own ego.

But the creation of a representative and responsible society is a sustained and demanding collective enterprise.

Heroic Efforts

Making sense out of our world in our time; dealing imaginatively and responsibly with all the elements of increasing breakdown; addressing ourselves to basic causes of war and not just to their consequences; turning man's dominant energies to producing something less suicidal and more edifying than holocaust-making weapons; respecting the precarious conditions that make life possible; assuring an adequate supply of oxygen and unpoisoned water; ensuring the right of separate peoples to separate cultures and institutions; using science and technology in a way that frees man rather than diminishes him — all these require heroic collective efforts on a scale yet unknown in human experience.

If history has anything useful to say to us in these matters, it is that we can avert a monolithic world government not by positioning ourselves against all forms of world authority but by creating a world federal government.

By this is meant a pluralistic world society of responsible powers in which the central authority is adequate to the protection of its members and is responsive to world opinion.

Such a federal government might be considered beyond man's reach if it were beyond his imagining. But an age that has put men on the moon shouldn't have to be reminded that what is conceivable is attainable.

The Affected Affliction

By ISRAEL SHENKER

LONDON — When Evelyn Waugh, the novelist of social graces, wanted to portray the "esthete par excellence" in "Brideshead Revisited," he gave Anthony Blanche that peculiarly British distinction: a stammer.

As cultured affectation, such languorous hesitations have become a mark of breeding in this kingdom, and nobles and commoners give halting tribute. Whenever Parliament is in session, the nation indulges any representative who pays lip service to the eminently British artifice. Enchanted with the sound of their own voice, members then act for all the world as though practice makes imperfect.

During the most recent House of Commons adjournment debate, for example, it semed unlikely that the issue (to adjourn or not to adjourn) could ever come to a vote, since successive orators seemed incapable of reaching the ends of words, let alone speeches. In two hours selected at random, six MPs stammered — mildly or wildly — as they struggled to unburden themselves of well-pondered judgments.

Reputations in the House can be made and destroyed with a single word, and a lifted eyebrow can exprss unspeakable eloquence, but no one betrayed the slightest astonishment at this confluence of stammerers.

When the mother of Parliaments gives so firmly halting a lead, is it any wonder that a stammerer has become fashionable in other calculating circles?

"I'm convinced there's a small room up in the attic of the Foreign Office where future diplomats are taught to stammer," said Peter Ustinov, the ambassador extraordinary to arts and letters. "I can see it all. 'Try again,' the instructor says. 'Now withdraw the breath!!'"

Ustinov, whose fluency seems staggering in every language, never ceases to marvel at the example of his friend, the French Ambassador to Morocco, who speaks French, Italian, German, Spanish and goodness-knows-how many-other-languages. "He stammers only in English," said Ustinov.

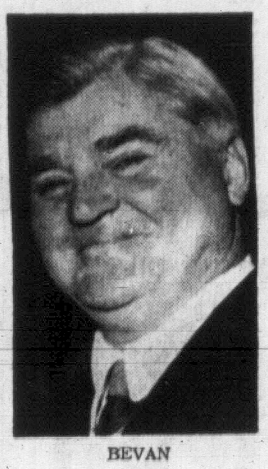

In Britain it is sometimes difficult to separate the unfeigned physical disability, which can be a source of endless embarrassment, from the affectation that lifts a man above the herd who speak effortlessly while no one listens. There seems little doubt that Britain is uniquely rich in affliction and affectation both.

George VI was cruelly afflicted, while Winston Churchill and Aneurin Bevan subdued their stammers to become famous orators. When Bevan was asked how he cured himself, he replied, "by torturing my audiences."

●

Oliver W. Sacks, an English neurologist, suggested that the affectation is designed to give "an impression of uncertainty, and then something absolutely devastating comes out."

His friend, Jonathan Miller, the physician, author, theatre director and stammerer, warned that the person who adopts the stammer must never disfigure himself with it. "It's always a subtle syncopation of his eloquence rather than an obstacle to his speech," said Miller.

"The stammerer is believed to be a diffident personality, and diffidence is of the essence of good breeding. Only the parvenu is thrusting enough to speak directly, and the person of good breeding hesitates in his words.

It's Blondie With an R Rating

By RUSSELL BAKER

"Diary of a Mad Housewife" is a movie about a nice girl married to an unremittingly asinine jerk. It is an enduring formula. Somebody and William Bendix did it successfully for years on television as "The Life of Riley." In the comic strips Chic Young has made a life's work of it as "Blondie."

In this latest variation there are just enough switches to make the film seem trendy and sociologically up-to-the-second. The customary nudity. The obligatory lexicon of vulgarities to show that the characters are earthy, liberated, and above hyprocrisy and euphemism and all that.

★ ★ ★

From this you can see what "Diary of a Mad Housewife" is up to. It is using the new candor — yards of flesh, saying "po-po" — to make us think we are watching a film of Social Importance. It takes a while, at least if you have read the wrong reviews, to become undeceived about the notion that this is a movie about the predicament of the American wife.

Men in the audience should get the tip-off from the frequency with which they laugh at the boobish husband. He is so utterly inept, dim-witted, swinish, insensitive and dreary that the most dreary, insensitive, dim-witted, inept swine of an American married man must feel contempt for him.

If this were a movie about terrible things that marriage does to the American woman, men in the audience would probably not have a laugh all evening. Yet husbands are likely to enjoy the thing immensely and to leave the theatre feeling superior.

This is because it is not a film of Social Importance, but a clever comedy, based on an old formula, about two caricatures who could never possibly exist, fall in love, marry and live together anywhere except in television or comic strips.

What we have is "Blondie" with an R rating. This not to say that the movie isn't good. It is clever, entertaining, funny — at least for men — and, best of all, never contemptible of the formula on which it is working.

It is a credit to the film's maker that he has worked so earnestly to throw us off the scent of his formula. Formula is not what makes a bad formula film bad, it is the failure to go beyond the formula.

Recently, there has been an even more depressing factor. This is the new tendency to treat reliable formulas with contempt, and it is responsible for some terrible films. How many more Westerns that spoof Westerns will we have to sit through? How many more spy thrillers that put on spy thrillers? Gangster films that wink archly about being gangster films?

These put-on's seem to reflect an embarrassment among the people who make them, an embarrassment apparently caused by awareness of their own creative poverty and contempt for their own work, which is all that these spoofs and put-on's seem to be about.

Skill, and maybe artistry, are required to make a good new western. A movie maker who is scared to test himself will settle instead nowadays for another put-on of the Western formula, with Indians speaking Yiddish, TV comedians doing their drunk bits, and so on.

It probably takes courage nowadays even to try to make a good formula film. For this reason "Diary of a Mad Housewife" seems admirable in a season that has Gabin and Delon spoofing Robinson and Cagney, Dean Martin spoofing Gary Cooper and Michael Caine doing a put-on of Michael Caine.

★ ★ ★

The formula figure of husband-as-ninny — Dagwood, Riley, etc. — is the bowdlerized American version of Europe's favorite comic butt, the husband-as-cuckold. In European comedy the husband was usually a ninny who had to pay for his ninniness. In the American version it is the poor wife who pays. "Diary of a Mad Housewife" is faithful to the crueler American joke, but with a variation that heightens the cruelty.

The housewife — she is such a cliche that even her name doesn't stay with you — looks for release from her life sentence by finding a lover, only to discover that the lover she has chosen cannot stand women.

In the formula of the nice girl married to the hopeless jerk, as laughed at in America, the girl is never allowed to escape. (No wonder men in the audience laugh so happily.) Poor Blondie! After all those years with Dagwood, there is still no relief in sight. Why, one wonders, do they call this comedy?

We need not weep for women. In reality women are always escaping, but that is a matter of Social Importance which cannot be dismissed with R-rating treatment.

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. reports net earnings of $1.87 million or 27 cents a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $2.7 million or 41 cents a share for the same period last year.

The company reported sales of $115 million, up from $114 million in the same nine months of 1969.

James A. Pattison, chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the drop in earnings to the company's carpet distribution subsidiary, Imbrex.

He said the new Bigelow Canada Ltd. carpet mill, of which Neonex has a 50 per cent interest, is expected to become a new source of earnings.

Canadian Exports Run High

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada registered a record surplus of $461 million in dealings in goods and services with the rest of the world from July through September, Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Monday.

The surplus on the current account of the balance of international payments during the third quarter of the year was generated from a strong performance in merchandise trade, in which the value of exports outstripped imports by $720 million.

The third-quarter current-account surplus compared to a surplus of $6 million in the same three months of 1969, a deficit of $190 million in the final quarter of last year and surpluses of $41 million and $246 million in the first two quarters of this year.

Adjusted to discount the usual summer upswing in export activity, the July-September surplus is reduced to $163 million, down from $264 million and $309 million in the first and second quarters respectively. But it still shows substantial strength compared with a seasonally-adjusted deficit of $279 million in the third quarter of last year.

REVALUATION NOT FELT

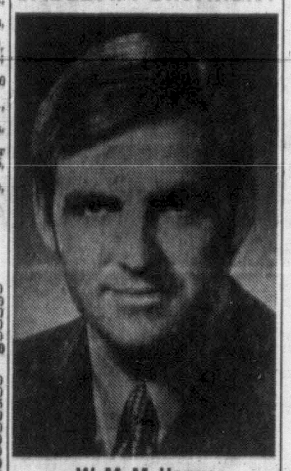

The statistics bureau said revaluation of the Canadian dollar June 1, which would tend to make Canadian products more expensive to foreign buyers and imports cheaper in Canada, did not appear to be a major drag on Canada's growing merchandise-trade surplus.

The excess value of exports over imports in the first nine months of this year approached a record $2 billion, nearly 15 per cent fatter than during the same 1969 period.

Only a small part of the growth resulted from an increase in the average price of Canadian exports by about 3.5 per cent while the price of imports advanced by less than three per cent.

Although there were signs of some slowing down in the exporting pace during the third quarter, importing activity remained sluggish because of a slowdown in Canadian business and productive activity and consumer spending.

Anti-Dumping Tribunal At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — A public hearing was held Monday by a member of the federal anti-dumping tribunal into a complaint which alleged importation of liquid chlorine at a cut-price damaging to local industry.

The complaint was made by Hooker Chemical Co., which has a plant in North Vancouver, against Dow Chemical Co., whose Canadian subsidiary imported the chlorine. The chemical is used by pulp mills for bleaching.

The hearing by commissioner A. P. Mills of Ottawa was the first held by the tribunal in British Columbia.

The tribunal has 90 days to issue a finding. In this instance, the finding must be issued by Jan. 13, 1971.

TSE Announces Listing Guidelines

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange has announced a new policy that will provide the first set of specific guidelines for stopping trading in a stock. The amendment to TSE bylaws goes into effect April 1, 1971.

To maintain its listing on the exchange a company must have at least 50,000 shares in public distribution. The distribution must also be divided among at least 75 shareholders who own a board lot — generally 100 shares — or more. For an industrial company this is 25 per cent of the original listing requirement. The minimum 75 shareholders cannot include officials of the company or anyone directly or indirectly connected with a controlling group or underwriting company.

The minimum net tangible assets required to be maintained by an industrial company will be $250,000, a quarter of the original listing requirement of $1 million. The minimum net liquid assets for continued listing of mining and oil companies, established by a previous bylaw, is $25,000. Asset requirements for original listings of mining and oil companies vary.

An exchange spokesman said there may be some companies now listed that would not meet the new requirements but the number was not known. The spokesman said there would not be an automatic review of all listed companies to determine whether they meet standards. Each case of suspected non-compliance would be treated individually.

The general criteria in the new bylaw provides for broad exchange powers. A company may be delisted when in the opinion of the exchange:

"The financial condition and/or operating results of the company appear to be unsatisfactory and do not warrant continuation of the security on the list;

"It appears that the public distribution of the security or the net tangible asset value of the company has been so reduced as to make further dealings in the security on the exchange inappropriate;

"The company has sold or otherwise disposed of its principal operating assets, or has ceased to be an operating company;

"The company has failed to comply with its listing agreement with the exchange, or;

"Any other event shall occur or any condition shall exist which makes further dealings on the exchange in the security unwarranted."

Inland Gas

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. of Vancouver reports net earnings of $2 million or 67 cents a share for the year ended Sept 30, up $2,700 from 1969.

The company reported natural gas sales of $2.26 million for the July-September period, $105,887 less than in the same period last year. It balmed the reduction on pulp mill strikes.

Senator Denies He's for Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Senator-elect Lloyd Bentson of Texas says Republicans should count him out as an ideological ally.

"I am coming here as a member of the loyal opposition, not to be part of the Nixon forces," he told reporters.

Bentsen said he told the president the same thing during a courtesy call Monday. Through the day Nixon greeted senators-elect from New York, Ohio, Maryland, Connecticut, Tennessee and Delaware, as well as Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, his 1968 presidential opponent.

After Bentsen unseated liberal Democrat Ralph Yarborough in the May primary and went on to win the Nov. 3 general election, Nixon indicated it was an ideological victory for himself, increasing his backing on foreign policy and defence.

Toboggan Ban Seen

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — Revision of a city bylaw governing use of power toboggans may result in a total ban on their use within city limits, Mayor Elmer Borstad said Monday.

"We're going to have to do something," he said, indicating the subject will come before city council soon.

Legislation enacted last winter provided a system of motor toboggan corridors where operators could travel on specific routes to outlying areas.

Reg Clarkson, conference organizer, said more than 100 informed laymen and professionals will form the workshops. He said the groups will prepare a master plan for prevention of alcohol problems in Greater Victoria.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

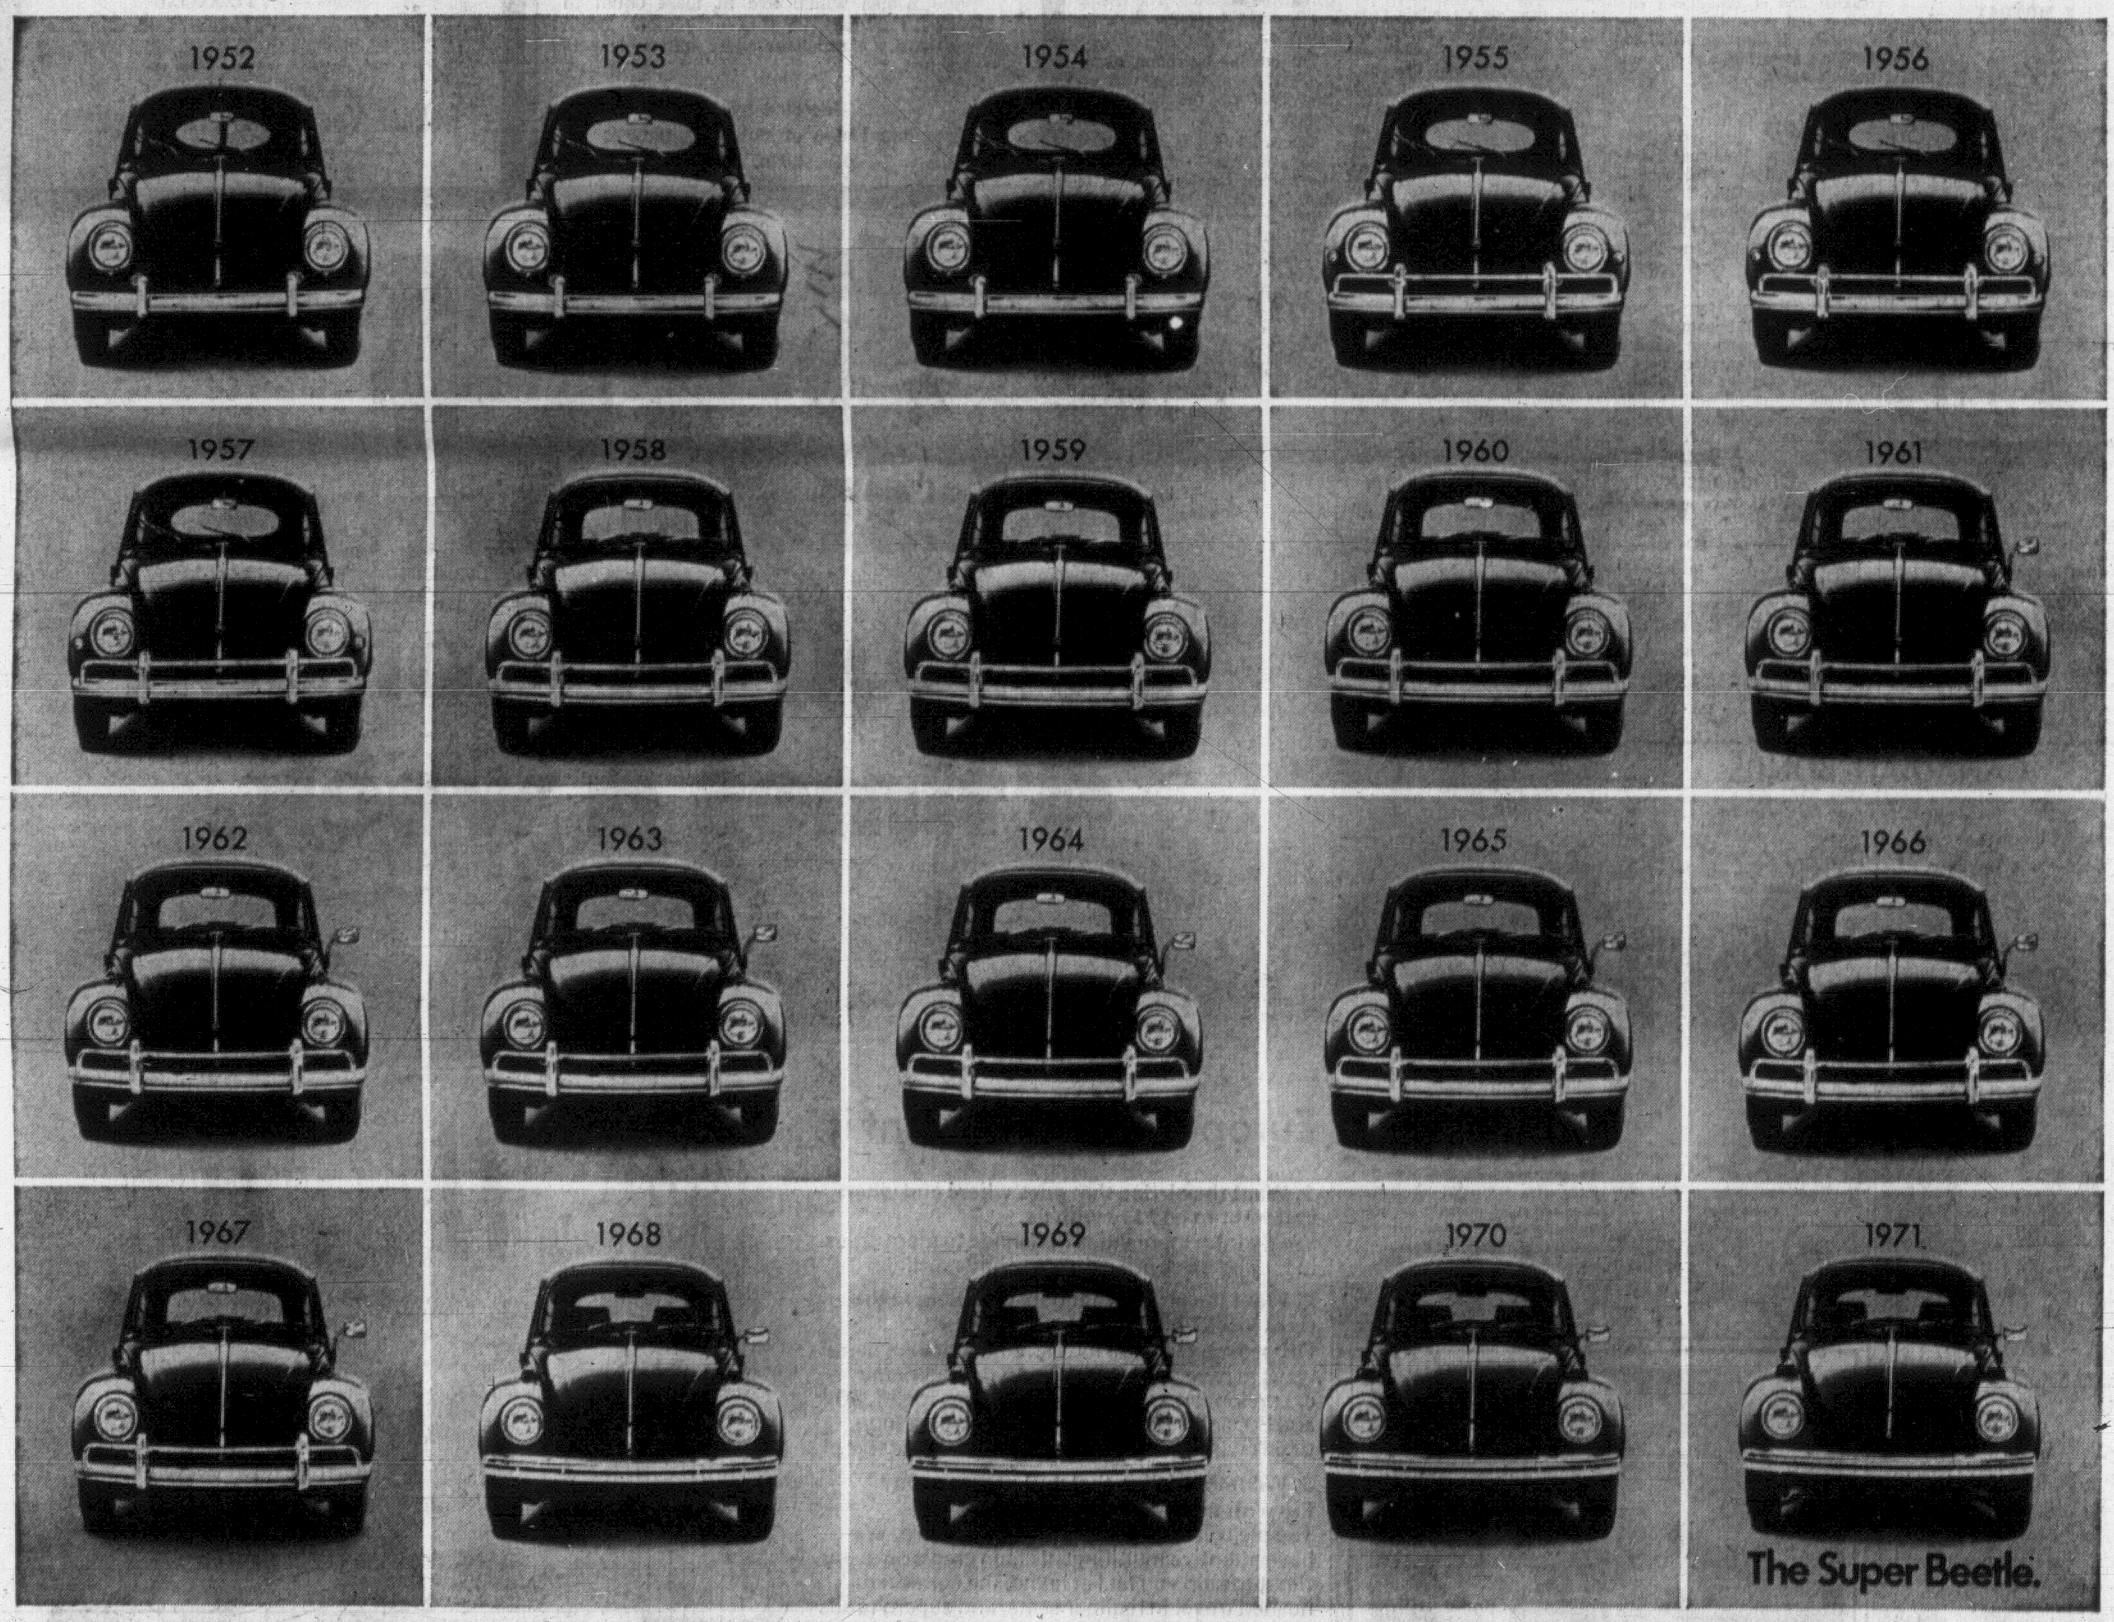

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

So what have we got to show for all that time and effort?

Take any new Volkswagen.

If there's a nick in the paint or a scratch on the chrome, somebody else put it there. Not us.

You won't find a jumble of wires under the dash. Just smooth, shiny painted steel.

Inside the glove compartment? Smooth and beautifully finished.

Under the hood? Shiny and smooth.

Under the fenders? Shiny and smooth.

Even if you removed the door panel, you'd find it the same. Smooth and shiny.

And if you saw the way we made them, you'd know why this is true.

As part of our paint job, every single car is hand-sanded and hand-washed. Every engine is run in before it becomes part of the car. And after.

Every single part that has to do with safety is individually inspected and then individually stamped with the inspector's individual initials.

Almost a quarter of a century and 60,000 improvements later, we give you the end result of this madness for perfecting perfection.

Disputed Public Order Clause Passed

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons continues debate today on the government's proposed public order bill, having rejected Monday an NDP amendment that would have limited what New Democrat and Conservative spokesmen called an unjust retroactive clause.

The Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, would replace regulations invoked under the War Measures Act, slightly limiting the government's powers of arrest and detention under the regulations.

The contested clause states that evidence that a person attended a number of meetings of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, or spoke in support of the FLQ or communicated statements on its behalf, even before the bill goes into force, "is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that he is a member of the unlawful association.

The NDP amendment would have limited the prosecution to evidence of participation in the FLQ after Oct. 16, the day the War Measures Act was invoked and many alleged FLQ members were jailed.

The amendment was defeated 51-29, with New Democrats, Conservatives, Creditistes and one Liberal lining up against the Liberal majority. The Liberal dissident was Pierre de Bane (Matane).

Supporters of the amendment stressed two points: that the clause was unjustly retroactive, making a person a criminal for committing acts at a time when those acts were not illegal; and that the clause placed an unfair onus on the accused to prove his innocence.

Justice Minister John Turner said the clause simply means that evidence of actions committed in the past could be used to show that a person was at present a supporter of the FLQ and therefore liable to imprisonment.

He said the onus is still on the Crown to show beyond reasonable doubt that the person is guilty, despite the "presumptive evidence" of past actions.

NDP Deputy Leader David Lewis, who moved the amendment, called the retroactive aspect of the bill "entirely unacceptable and contrary to the basic principle of our criminal law, indeed most of our law, and contrary to any principle of civil liberties and civil rights."

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) agreed that the bill would force a person to prove his innocence, and added that the problem is not that we require stronger law.

"What we need today is to clean up the mess as far as the police force of the province of Quebec is concerned," Mr. Woolliams said.

Referring to reports that police, when arresting Bernard Lortie Nov. 6, left weapons in an apartment which were later stolen by three other FLQ fugitives, the Calgary lawyer suggested the Quebec police had been infiltrated.

The charge that weapons had been left by police was denied Monday by Quebec authorities.

Earlier in the Commons Prime Minister Trudeau rejected opposition suggestions that an independent commission be set up to investigate police effectiveness under the War Measures Act.

Solicitor-general George McIlraith, replying to a question from Mr. Woolliams, said it would be inappropriate for the federal government to investigate the administration of justice, which is a provincial responsibility under the constitution.

In the Senate meanwhile, a decision was postponed on whether to start an investigation of the proposed sale of Ryerson Press to a U.S. firm.

Senator Hazen Argue (L—Saskatchewan) urged that the proposed sale of the United Church-supported publisher to McGraw-Hill be investigated by the Senate banking committee.

Debate on the proposal was adjourned after A. H. McDonald (L—Saskatchewan) said he wanted to find out more about the textbook situation in Canada before making a decision.

In the debate on the public order bill, the Commons also rejected an amendment by John Gilbert (NDP—Broadview) that would give a judge, rather than the provincial attorney-general, power to decide whether suspects should be released on bail.

Mr. Turner argued that FLQ members released on bail could flee the country, untouchable through existing extradition agreements.

These extradition treaties would not cover crimes created by the bill, Mr. Turner said.

Another rejected amendment by Mr. Gilbert would have reduced to 30 days from 90 the time a person could be held without a trial date being set.

French Group Urges Multi-Lingualism

By BOB DOUGLAS

REGIN A(CP) — An association representing French-speaking residents of Saskatchewan recommended Monday that official languages other than English or French should be allowed in certain regions in Canada.

Roger Lalonde, president of l'Association Culturelle Franco-Canadienne de la Saskatchewan, told the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution here:

"Each province should decide on its own official languages and should be able to declare a language other than English or French as official throughout its territory, or in a political or civic region under its jurisdiction."

Mr. Lalonde's brief was described by committte chairman Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor Walkerville) as a "generous one in that it has recommended rights for other groups than his own."

The brief was presented at the first public hearing in the committee's tour of Saskatchewan.

ASKS EDUCATION AID

The meeting was told by Allan Blakeney, New Democratic Party leader in Saskatchewan, that the federal government should pay a larger share of the costs of post-secondary education. He also urged national planning of post-secondary education.

Mr. Blakeney and a group of political science students from tht Regina campus of the University of Saskatchewan also scored what they said was unequal representation by population in the Saskatchewan legislature. The student brief suggested a mandatory jail term of five years and a fine of $5,000 for "gerrymandering"—undue political influence in setting boundaries of electoral districts.

Mr. Lalonde said that provinces currently have the right to declare whatever official languages they wish in their jurisdictions.

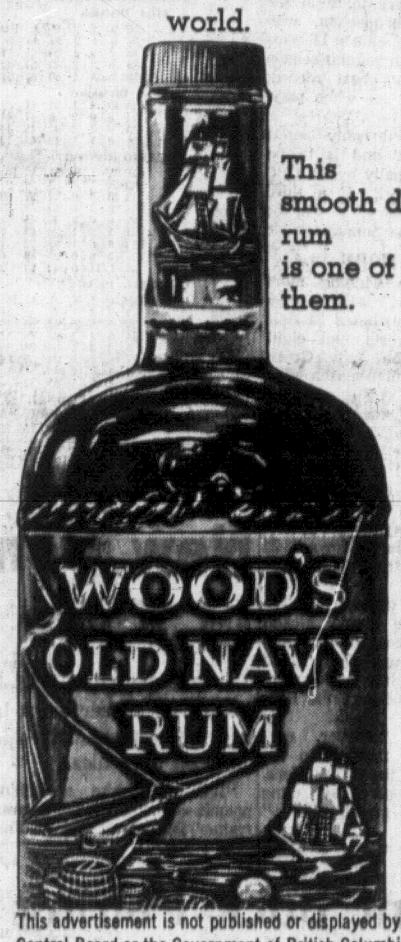

They should use this right, he said. It could mean that Eskimo would be an official language in certain parts of the country. People could be served by government agencies in that language.

"If these Canadian cultural facts are not positively recognized in our constitution, we fear that they will continue to be subjected to unconscious yet ill-fated repression, as though they were outlawed," Mr. Lalonde said.

Replying to Gilles Marceau (L—Lapointe), Mr. Lalonde said that conditions have improved for the French-speaking community in Saskatchewan in recent years.

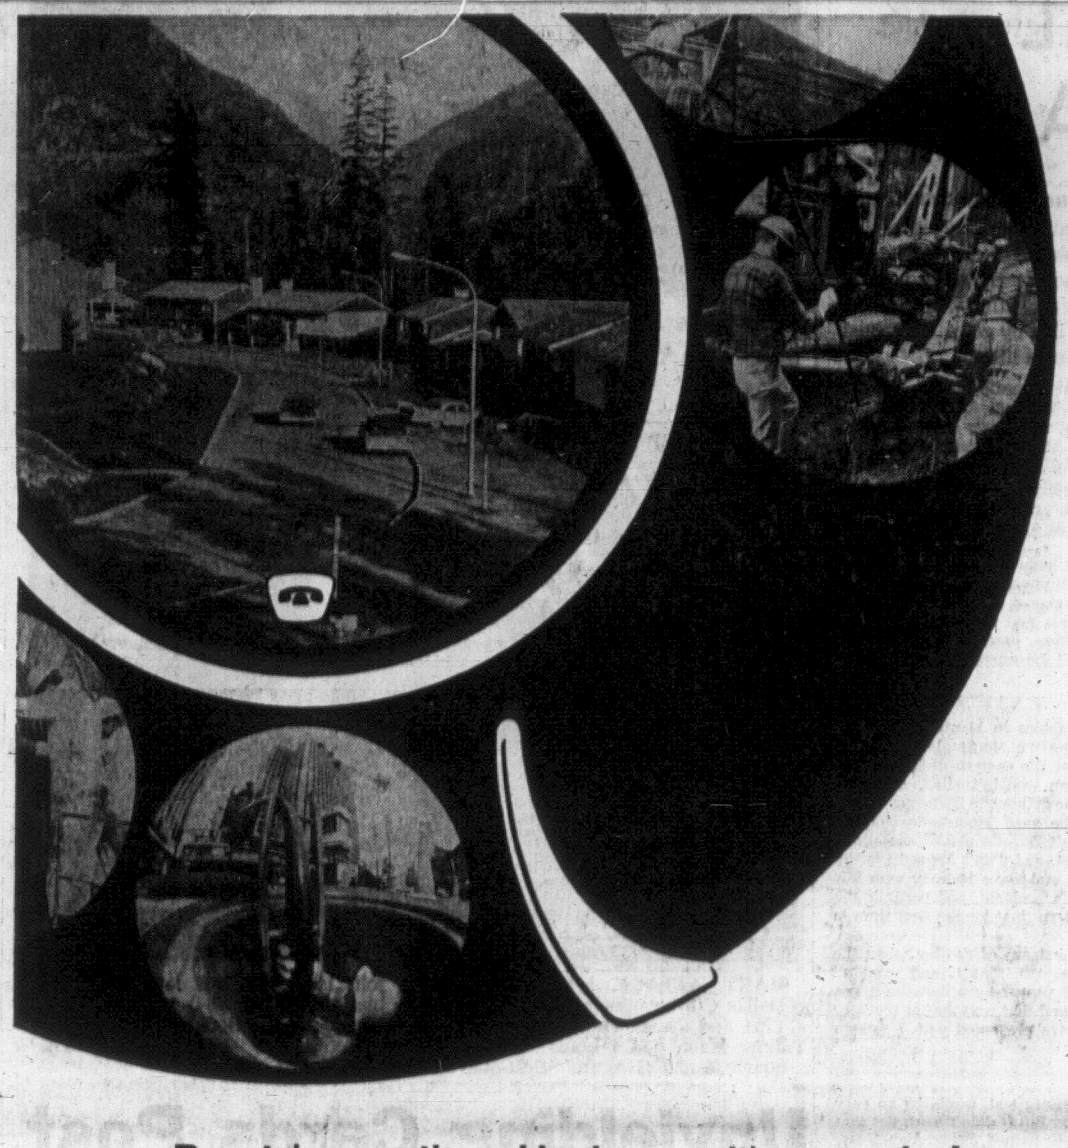

French-speaking students now could be taught in their own language in a number of schools.

B.C. Tel spent more than $9 million in 1969 to put telephone cables and other installations underground. We'll spend as much doing this in 1970. Even more in '71.

We hope, as you do, that eventually all overhead wires and street-side poles in British Columbia will be eliminated — without increasing the cost of your phone service.

New techniques and machines have made it practical to install underground facilities in new communities and subdivisions when we're brought in on the early planning. Witness many such instances throughout British Columbia, among them Gold River where all cables went underground when the community was built, or Prince George where phone facilities are buried as each new subdivision is developed.

But make no mistake . . . it's a costly affair to put existing overhead installations underground in an already-developed area. The cost is enormous — so it can't be done overnight — without a tremendous increase in costs to telephone users!

But it can be done . . . providing we do it on a step-by-step basis . . . as resources permit. In this way, we're making real progress in preserving British Columbia's beauty. And we won't stop until the job's complete!

SENIOR BABE RUTH SECTIONAL TOURNAMENT

PRO AND COLLEGE SCOUTS WILL BE WATCHING

Yet Another Baseball Prize Awarded to Victoria

Victoria has plucked yet another baseball plum.

The 1971 Pacific sectional tournament for Babe Ruth 16-18-year-olds will be staged here next August.

The announcement was made today by Wilf Sadler of Victoria, an international director of Babe Ruth baseball.

The 16-18 division, created only four years ago, is one that is carefully scrutinized by professional and college baseball scouts.

The sectional tournament, which actually encompasses two Babe Ruth regions, will draw teams from Alaska, Washington, Nevada, North and South California, Guam and British Columbia. In addition, the host city (Victoria) is granted automatic entry to provide a balanced, eight-team tournament.

Former New York Yankee great Lefty Gomez will be invited to Victoria to participate in the week-long tournament to be played at Royal Athletic Park.

Sadler, naturally is ecstatic with Victoria's selection.

"When the Northwest Babe Ruth regional tournament for 13-15-year-olds was played here in 1959, we drew the largest crowds since the days of professional baseball. About 15,000 saw games in three days, including a final-game turnout of about 4,500.

"This one will be better. It brings out the best of an age group that is just beginning to mature. That's why the scouts and college coaches really keep their eyes on these boys.

"As well, each team is an all-star squad selected from its league. When you start picking all-stars from six to eight or more teams, you start looking at some very good squads."

Victoria's 16-18 Babe Ruth division was introduced last year. There were five teams last season but Sadler feels at least eight will be in operation next year.

The appearance of the senior Babe Ruthers will mark the second major tournament scheduled for Victoria in 1971. Victoria Centennials, who captured the national senior championship in Brandon this fall, will be host for the 1971 Canadian tournament.

The Canadian Little League championships have been staged here twice in the past few years along with numerous regional and provincial tournaments for most levels of minor baseball.

"Almost invariably," said Sadler, "our tournaments have been highly successful, particularly in the opinion of visiting officials.

"This sectional playoff should be the best yet."

BILL WALKER

It is not yet certain if all the members of the Montreal Alouettes are acknowledged disciples of the new Sam Etcheverry doctrine: "early to bed, early to rise, makes a football player healthy, wealthy, and able to win football games." But by golly, they must be beginning to believe it, if just a little.

You may recall what started as a sordid tale. A couple of weeks ago, two members of the Montreal Alouettes football team were found out for what they were while living the good, life of a sports hero in a downtown Montreal bistro. This fact is not unusual in itself, nor in the life of a professional athlete, but what was to follow most certainly was. For Slingin' Sam Etcheverry, coach of the Alouettes, promptly threw the purity code at the imbibers, and besides, he kicked them right off the team.

This was unheard of, but Sam hadn't been told. He made the suspensions stick, and neither fullback Dennis Duncan nor pass receiver Bob McCarthy have played a game with the Als since. Another chapter of the story is that the two players had been warned earlier against their particular pursuit of happiness in public, yet they ignored the warning.

This naturally raised a few hackles in Montreal, and the odds on the Argos in Toronto, when the Montrealers came to town a week ago Sunday to contest the eastern division semi-final playoff. Surely the suspension wouldn't stick, everyone thought. But it did, and with Duncan having been one of the most proficient ball carriers in the east, Montreal's chances had to be lessened. After all, hadn't Duncan gained something like 823 yards, third best in the east, and didn't Argos have the two leaders, Bill Symons with 908 and Dave Raimey with 839. Surely, the Als would pose less of a problem, and perhaps the Argos would get to play in the eastern final for the first time in eight years.

Because, weren't the Argos the team of destiny when the season started (and selected here, too, alas!), and wouldn't they win their first Grey Cup in 18 years? Sure, but the Argos didn't know it, and they hadn't played that well during the year either. But now, suddenly, they were presented with a golden opportunity.

The Als, having passed the sobriety test, would be an easy mark with their best rusher missing. But it didn't work out that way. For when it was over, a fellow named Bobby Van Ness, who likely endorses soda pop, of all things, had filled Duncan's boots quite capably, and a Quebec MLA, of all other people, had booted three field goals. George Springate had done his moonlighting well. And so the Argos were dead. The Als, on a diet of total abstinence, were still alive, and a solid blow had been struck for the puritans.

The second lesson of this epistle was delivered on Sunday, in a Montreal bog. The Alouettes spotted a good Hamilton team 14 points, and then came back to whomp them soundly, 32-22. Now, it can be said they are almost in the Grey Cup final, and will be, providing they win, or lose by no more than 10 points, when they again meet the Tiger Cats next weekend.

And so righteousness shall prevail, for this week at least, and perhaps for the fortnight until Grey Cup Day, Nov. 28.

Not that it always has. For it's continuing hitory that some of the greatest of all athletes were notorious for their after-hours shenanigans; and the daddy of the self-indulgence set, in the matter of prestige of accomplishment, has to be Babe Ruth.

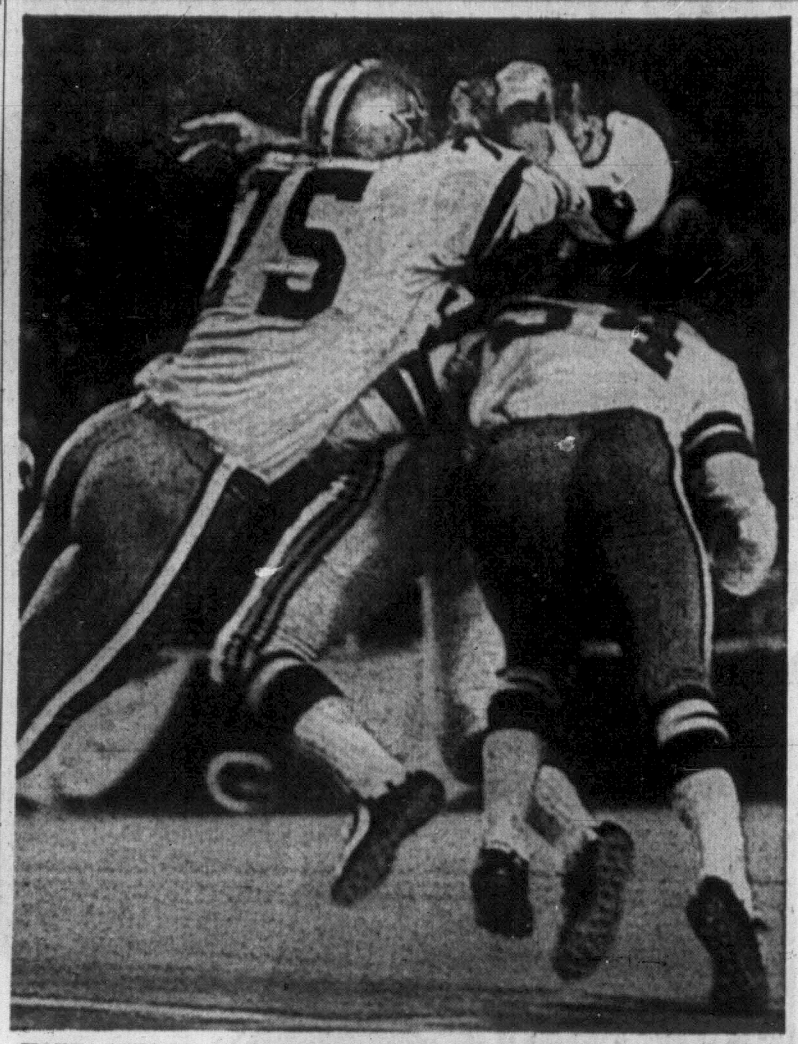

●

He was king of the party set, just as he was on the diamond. And my, how he could hit a baseball the next day, too. Joe Namath is the current example of the best known expert on flushing out quail, nightly, and he led the New York Jets to the Super Bowl, didn't he? And Sugar Ray Robinson. He won all sorts of boxing titles, but now he admits he may have done better if he hadn't admired the other sex as much as he did. Sure, the list is probably endless, but only the most famous names are recalled. For most others their debauchery, brought upon by athletic success, was their eventual doom.

But never were celebrating stars suspended before an important playoff! It wouldn't be tolerated. Not on the team. Nor in the town. Nor in Montreal. It just wouldn't work.

But it has worked.

Because, for Sam, the "bon vivant" can come later. Like late afternoon on Grey Cup Day. There will be no restrictions then.

HART ATTACK is portrayed as Dallas Cowboy linemen Jethro Pugh (75) and Chuck Howley level off on Jim Hart, St. Louis Cardinals' quarterback. Unyielding Cards Post Third Straight Shutout

DALLAS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals, supported by an unyielding defence, crushed Dallas Cowboys 38-0 Monday night in a National Football League game and became the first NFL team in 35 years to record three consecutive shutouts.

The fierce Cardinal defence smothered Dallas' once fiery offence at every turn. The win kept the Cardinals ahead of New York Giants in National Conference's Eastern Division.

Johnny Roland dashed 74-yards on a punt return for one Cardinal score and ran 10 and three yards for two others.

The other Cardinal tallies came on a 48-yard double reverse by John Gilliam, a 29-yard run by Roy Shivers, and a 31-yard field goal by Jim Bakken.

CARDS 113, OTHERS 0

St. Louis now has outscored its last three opponents 113-0. It beat Houston Oilers 44-0, Boston Patriots 31-0, and now Dallas.

The Cardinals are 7-2 and the Giants are 6-3. Dallas is 5-4 and sinking fast.

Cardinal coach Charley Winner, who had never beaten Dallas on the road, said he wasn't trying to run up the score even though the Cardinals exploded for 21-points in the final period.

"We were trying for the shutout," Winner said.

In the third period as the score mounted, the fans, who once booed Don Meredith, the former Dallas quarterback, changed: "We want Meredith . . . We want Meredith."

Jolly Green Out to Prove They're Best

JACK ABENDSCHAN
. . . Riders best ever?

REGINA (CP) — Jack Abendschan, whose place-kicking has saved Saskatchewan Roughriders from several tight spots this season, says the Roughriders are determined to prove themselves against Calgary Stampeders.

"I think we have the best team Saskatchewan has ever had," said Abendschan, who is preparing along with his teammates for Wednesday night's second game in Calgary of the Western Football Conference playoffs.

Abendschan, WFC scoring champion for the last two seasons, contributed a field goal, a single and a convert Saturday when the Roughriders lost 28-11 to the Stampeders in the first game of the best-of-three final.

"We beat every team in the East," said Abendschan, who admits that the club's 14 wins and two losses in regular-season play, the team's best record, doesn't cut any ice when playoffs start.

The game Wednesday begins at 7 p.m. PST and is to be broadcast nationally by the CBC television network. If a third game is necessary, it will be played in Regina Sunday.

KICKERS WIN MORE

"Kickers are winning more games recently," said Abendschan, who contributed 24 field goals, 36 converts and eight singles for "the Jolly Green Giants" in regular-season play this year and also provided some eleventh-hour theatrics.

His finest moment came in Regina's Taylor Field Sept. 18 when he booted a 47-yard field goal, his third three-pointer of the night, with just three seconds left to play in the game, providing the margin for a 23-22 victory over British Columbia Lions.

Abendschan, six-foot-one, 245-pound offensive guard, kicked another field goal on the last play of the game Sept. 27 in Winnipeg to give the Roughriders a 5-3 win over the Blue Bombers.

Abendschan, however, contributes a lot more than his kicking skill to the Roughriders. "Kicking is a secondary thing with me to my guard playing," he said.

New Confidence In Extra Pounds

DETROIT (AP)—Bob Foster will weigh the heaviest of his career when he fights Joe Frazier for the heavyweight championship. But the real gain won't show on the scales.

"It's given him a million pounds of confidence," veteran trainer Bill Gore said of Foster's added weight. "He actually thinks he's going to tip Frazier over."

"I know I'm ready for this," the light heavyweight champion said Monday after completing his training for the scheduled 15-round fight Wednesday night in Cobo Arena.

The added weight—Foster is expected to weigh in at about 184—and its accompanying confidence are the results of a different and intense training program, according to Foster. His previous high fighting weight was 177, two pounds over the light-heavy limit.

For the first time in preparing for a fight Foster did calisthenics. He also, according to Gore, is eating properly.

"Before, he showed up at the gym, punched the bag, spit on the floor a couple of times and went home," Gore said of Foster's previous training habits.

ENDS GYM WORK

Frazier, who is expected to weigh 205, concluded his training by sparring three rounds with Coleman Williams.

21st Century Promotions, Inc., is hoping for a turnout of about 10,000, which would mean a live gate of about $300,000, to watch Foster try to become the first light heavyweight king to win the heavyweight title.

The fight also will be the feature half of a closed-circuit television doubleheader. The first half will be a scheduled 10-rounder between heavyweights George Foreman and Boone Kirkman in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Joe Patterson added nine points to the Labs' total, two more than clubmate Mickey Bateman.

Grand Jury Interviews Grid Coaches

CLEVELAND (AP) — Blanton Collier, Cleveland Browns' coach, testified Monday before a federal grand jury investigating the National Football League and was followed by Tom Fears, fired New Orleans Saints' coach.

Collier spent one hour and 45 minutes before the 23-member jury, which is charged with investigating anti-trust cases.

"I answered all their questions," Collier told reporters after the hearing. "I have nothing further to say at this time."

Fears spent one hour and 30 minutes before the jury and told reporters he was not surprised at questions asked him. Asked whether the questions related to speculation that the jury might be investigating the NFL merger with the American Football League and alleged blackballing of some players, Fears said he could not comment.

"We shall be a club for athletes run by athletes . . ."

AROUND OUR SHORES

Full Crew a Must

One of the lessons that was hammered home this weekend when gale-force winds struck at the end of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's race of Sidney on Sunday is the foolhardiness of sailing a boat undercrewed.

One of the casualties was D. R. White's Cal 25 Despatch, who ended up on the rocks at Roberts Point after she made an accidental jibe and her boom caught in the backstay.

White was sailing single-handed and was in no position to take the fast evasive action that such weather conditions demand.

Luckily he was able to scramble ashore and his boat was saved. But there could have been a different ending in another and less frequented locale.

★ ★ ★

The Turkey Head Sailing Association deserves a bow for trying to avoid such a situation by writing minimum crew requirements into its racing regulations.

It stipulates that boats between 13 and 20 feet must have a minimum crew of two, those from 20 to 26 feet must have at least three crewing, while yachts from 26 to 50 feet must have at least four crew members on board.

Fortunately, Sunday's race at Sidney resulted in no loss of life or boats but it was an impressive warning that safety rules are designed for seamen — not, by any means sissies.

The big winner was Bud Peetz's Saki. She was followed by Ben Jespersen's Limfjord, Gordie Inglis' Saltshaker, Arthur Moorehouse's Diana, John Benson's Venje, Ole Backhaus' Shalom, Merv Britten's Bird of Dawning, Will Jensen's Yogi, Dave Taylor's Achates and Bert Buchanan's Lirig Grhu.

There were 43 boats in the morning race, sailed in waters off Oak Bay. Every wind condition in the book was thrown at the competitors, ranging from soft flukey norwesterlies that blew about five knots at the beginning to lusty 30-knot sou'easterlies before the finish line was reached.

As the sou'easterlies filled in from behind the bigger boats were able to come into their own, moving up through the fleet.

Winners of the various classes were: Thunderbirds, Ligero; Haidas, Greg Oliver's T'Weather; Cal 25s, Puff; Sharks, J. P. Le Dallic's La Marquise; Calgan 23s,, Dave Hartwick's Spray; Cal 20s, Vern Stilborn's Calindigo; Cruising A, Shoal, and Cruising B, Gerry Howell-Jones' Heliwr.

After two of their number were dunked in waters outside Cadboro Bay Saturday, planing dinghy skippers of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club decided to call it a day.

Fireball skippers completed two races, three of them righting their boats and carrying on after having joining the 'flippers club.'

Rifle-Wielder Sent to Jail

DUNCAN — A 19-year-old Nitinat man, who had pointed a rifle at an RCMP officer, was sentenced to a total nine months definite and 15 months indeterminate Monday after he pleaded guilty to four charges.

Ronald David Edgar was taken into custody following an Oct. 8 break-in of a Lake Cowichan coffee bar.

He broke away, stole a rifle, and later pointed the weapon at Cpl. Scott Coxen of the Lake Cowichan RCMP.

The accused received six months definite, nine indeterminate on a charge of breaking, entering and theft, six months definite, nine indeterminate for theft of a .308 rifle, three months definite, six indeterminate, for possession of an offensive weapon.

The three sentences were to run concurrently.

On a fourth charge, dangerous use of a firearm, Edgar was sentenced to three months definite, six indeterminate.

Saltair Driver Jailed

CHEMAINUS — Brian Jan Timmer, 25, of Saltair, was sentenced Monday to three months in jail for driving while his licence was suspended.

Chemainus RCMP said it was Timmer's third offence.

Four people were fined for impaired driving.

Raymond Michaud of Nanaimo was fined $300 and his licence was suspended for three months.

Edna Dorothy Louis of Duncan was fined $50, prohibited from driving for 15 months and fined $15 for driving without a licence.

Cowichan Appeal Over $12,000

DUNCAN — Cowichan's United Appeal total has reached $12,166.

Appeal secretary Mrs. Doreen McIntyre said today there are still 70 residential canvassers to be heard from as canvassing in several areas is continuing.

Centre Shaping For Retarded

DUNCAN — The first stage has been completed on a $53,000 centre for retarded children.

Mrs. L. S. Sheppard, corresponding secretary of the Duncan and District Association for Retarded Children, said buildings donated by the Crofton pulp mill have been transferred to land leased from North Cowichan for $1 per year adjacent to the Cowichan exhibition grounds in Duncan.

Moving the old bunkhouses, arranging them to the architect's plan and covering them with a roof cost $12,000

When completed the centre will provide a sheltered workshop for mentally and physically handicapped adults, kindergarten and day care facilities for pre-school children and a recreation area.

"This centre is urgently needed to provide services for persons who by virtue of physical or mental handicaps, either permanent or temporary, are unable either to function in or are not accepted by industry and society," Mrs. Sheppard said.

"Our present services to the community are hampered by lack of adequate facilities."

Mrs. Sheppard said completion date will depend upon funds available and public support.

Estimated cost of the next stage, which will consist of installing plumbing, heating, wiring, framing the interior, completing a concrete wall and stucco work, is $26,000.

Oak Bay May Build Interim Centre

Oak Bay council may be asked to spend $200,000 on an interim activity centre now that its plans to build a $1 million recreation facility have been delayed.

Ald. Brian Smith told the parks committee Monday that the recreation commission will meet Wednesday and has advocated the creation of such a centre at Henderson Park.

The proposal is to build a 90-by-50 foot room which could be used for basketball, volleyball, badminton, other sports and dancing.

Questioned on costs, municipal engineer Geoffrey White said the room would cost about $130,000 and a caretaker's suite and changing rooms would cost an other $70,000.

Ald. Ian Horne asked about operating costs and was told they would be to about $8,000 a year.

While in favor of providing some sort of activity centre, Ald. Ian Horne warned that taxpayers would "not look favorably on duplication of facilities."

'NOT EXACTLY'

Smith observed: "It seems that the only hall of any size available now is the council chamber and the recreation carried on there is not exactly what the young people have in mind."

Oak Bay's plans for a recreation centre were set back when no bids were made on the sale of the Victoria Riding Academy property. Proceeds for the land sale were to have been earmarked for the centre.

Smith said Monday that council will have to decide in 1971 whether to build a small centre to fill an immediate need "or put all its recreation needs in one basket."

In other business, committee agreed to recommend that road improvement work on Hampshire be given top priority in 1971. White estimated it would cost $100,800 to widen the road to 36 feet, do resurfacing, improve surface drains and add two four-foot concrete sidewalks.

Other figures quoted for roadwork were $112,866 for widening and improving Byng, $37,000 for resurfacing Roslyn and $24,418 for work on Bowker.

Less University Spending Urged by Student Report

By BOB MITCHELL

A student-sponsored study of employment opportunities for British Columbia's student population has concluded that expansion of post-secondary ecucation can't be justified in economic terms.

A survey report says public funds which subsidize student costs at universities, colleges and technical schools would be better spent in other areas such as health care, welfare and old-age pensions.

Government allocations to post-secondary education, which now average $1,700 per student, considerably exceed the amount spent on old-age pensions, the report says.

"At present it is probable this personal per student subsidy even lacks economic justification in overall results."

The study of employment possibilities in B.C was set up last year by the B.C. Union of Students under the title Employment Task Force. The report on its results was written by Norman Wright, former student president of the University of Victoria.

Wright said major increases in education spending are for the time being "out of the question" until equality has been established between students and other social groups with "legitimate claims on personal benefits from the public treasury."

Current education policies coupled with economic realities have created a surplus of "over-educated" students who are either unemployed or working in jobs not related to their level of education, Wright's report said.

More education spending would not widen education opportunity but would in effect, subsidize the middle and upper classes whose sons and daughters make up the largest proportion of post-secondary students.

Wright said the fact that the majority of students who enjoy the benefits of higher education will continue to come from the more affluent sector of the community "is also a sound reason why society should make appropriate charges for those services," possibly in the form of a contingency repayment schedule.

The report contains the following findings:

- University of Victoria students are the most affluent in B.C.
- Women students expect and earn about $100 a month less than men after graduation;
- Manpower and student placement offices found summer jobs for only two per cent of the student population during 1970;
- Students are being squeezed out of the summer job market in primary industry.

Uvic students' relative affluence is based on figures which show they have the least personal debt at graduation. While 15 per cent of Uvic grads have debts of $2,500-$4,000, the percentage is 21 at the University of B.C. and 32 at Simon Fraser.

In a section which analyzed the undergraduate job market by sex, Wright found about 60 per cent of women students were willing to work all summer (four months) to save $1,000 or less. Only 39 per cent of male students were prepared to do so.

Students' faith in Canada Manpower and student placement offices was not justified, Wright said, because the combined efforts of both agencies dug up only four per cent of the jobs, or work for two per cent of the student population.

Only 19 per cent of the students said they saved enough money from a summer job to cover all their expenses. Most depended on some second source of income such as parents, government loans, scholarships or winter jobs.

In a survey of B.C. employers, Wright found companies under union contract can't hire students to work in major areas of operation. Primary industry firms said they could not use unskilled labor for any jobs, and that at today's wage rates they prefer employees with experience.

Wright concluded that "the majority of jobs for which students can qualify are never placed on the open market. They tend to be closed to previous employees, relations and friends."

Anti-Dope Pushers

Now People Try to Make Money Turning Kids Off

And It's Even Enough to Anger School Officials

By PETER McNELLY

The new drug scene is the anti-drug scene.

It is well-organized and frequently profitable. Some people are cashing in on it, but in Victoria the students are getting fed up.

"Kids are saying, 'for heaven's sake, cool it.' We're up to here with this drug education. Don't push it for a while," says E. G. Callbeck, director of special education services for the Greater Victoria School District.

Callbeck is responsible for the kind of drug information program available in nearly 60 region schools. He says his approach is "as low-key as possible."

●

Interviewed in his office at the Institute of Adult Studies, Callbeck produced mounds of anti-drug literature from Canadian and United States governments and publishing houses.

After nearly half an hour's quick perusal, he said this was only one-third the material he possessed. Most of it, he said, is unsolicited.

Two of the most interesting publications offer good examples of the kind of propaganda students can be subjected to in the name of drug education.

The first is a brochure produced by Ontario's Council on Drug Abuse, a non-profit foundation with a board of directors from several major Canadian corporations.

CODA's brochure is a stark white-on-black production with a page two pitch for money. The pitch continues through the last pages when CODA reveals that it is trying to raise $1.5 million to prepare a six-phase anti-drug program.

Besides Slick Kits and Games Callbeck Doesn't Like Paying $100 to Reformed Drug Addicts

Phase one, pamphlets and speakers kits. Phase two, movies and TV advertisements. Phase three, seminars, discussion groups and in-class anti-drug studies prepared by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in the U.S.

Phases four, five and six are an international symposium of drug abuse — held in August 1970 at the Ontario Science Centre — youth programs for small towns and help for "approved projects" of other anti-drug agencies.

CODA's advertising budget exceeds $100,000. Administration costs for 1970 are $91,400. CODA's material is slick, professional and hard-sell.

One promotional gimmick involves several small white-on-black posters — presumably for school bulletin boards — with sayings like, "speed kills" and "meth is death."

Though CODA is based in Ontario, it offered to pay $4 per pupil for 600 local students to try Lockheed's classroom drug education program.

Arrangements existed for a trial at one junior secondary school this fall, but Callbeck said the deal collapsed when CODA dropped Lockheed's program under criticism that it had too much of a "Madison Avenue" approach.

Callbeck said Lockheed then asked whether the school board would pay $2,400 for the trial. This was refused.

Lockheed's program is called "drug decision, an instructional package for grades 7 through 9 . . . that creates in the student an understanding and an awareness of the real problems connected with drug abuse."

The "instructional package" works in five phases. First, students are taught "disaster management" techniques. They then study the effect of drugs on man. Phase three studies the legal aspects of drug abuse.

After phases one through three are completed, students put their knowledge to use by playing the "drug attack game." In the game, students assume the roles of policemen, mayors and health officials.

Lockheed's literature states: "In the assumed role, the student is confronted with a simulated drug attack, and he is called upon to apply the knowledge he has gained in phases I, II and III to stop the attack and treat its victims."

Skilful use of information from the first three phases determines the winner. This is a kind of programmed learning experience which dictates the correct and incorrect options to the student.

The last phase is called "rehabilitation." Students spend four days acting out the role of persons committed to drug treatment centres and those responsible for patient care.

●

Lockheed's literature says a key aspect of this phase is that students become members of a board responsible for determining when patients can be released from treatment.

"In reaching his own decision, the student recognizes that he must consider the welfare of the individual as well as the requirements of society," Lockheed says.

Callbeck said the market for drug education campaigns has become staurated. The result is that students are becoming highly resistant to this kind of pitch.

"My objection is to the idea that drugs can be made profitable to the person who lectures, produces pamphlets, writes books or develops programs condemning the use of drugs to the point that the market becomes saturated."

He said other examples are reformed drug addicts who charge $100 to get on a stage and talk about drugs.

The school district's low-key policy on drugs is individual counselling. The board has hired nine counsellors who visit area schools throughout the year.

Callbeck says most counselling is initiated by the student, but a counsellor can call on students if he feels it is necessary, say in the case of suspected trafficking at school.

He says each counsellor handles his situation as he sees fit, but guarantees confidentiality.

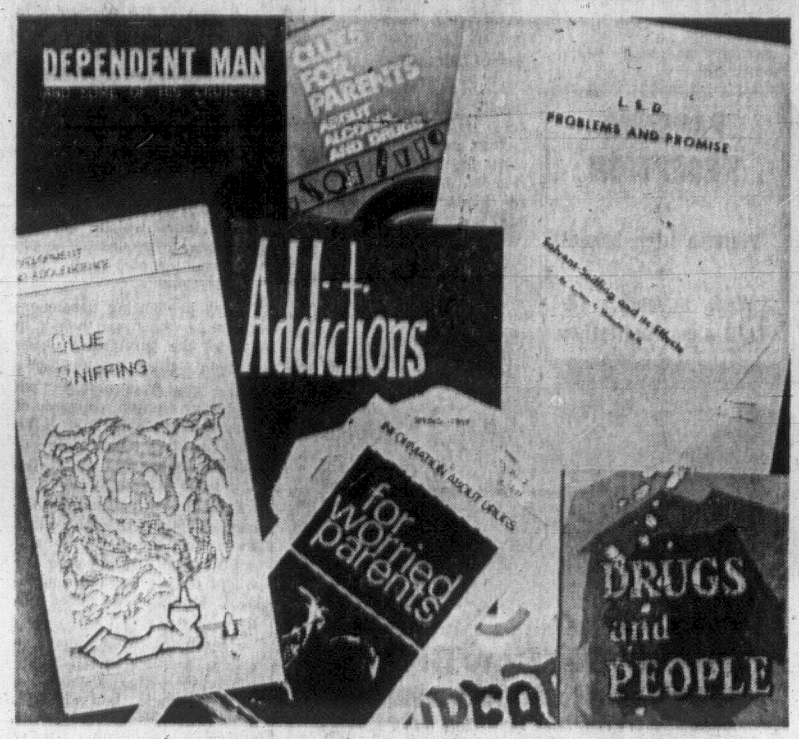

"I'm trying to adapt processes to the ways young people are acting and thinking. You just try crossing that generation gap. You can't wag your finger and expect to change them."

The board also has spent $240 preparing 600 drug information kits distributed to parents upon request. The kits limit themselves to four U.S. public health service booklets on narcotics, LSD, marijuana and amphetamines and barbituates.

The also contain a chart on symptoms of drug use and a booklet called Narcotic Drugs prepared by district counsellors and students.

Callbeck said the board permits the youth detail of the Victoria police to visit area schools. Cool-Aid's Charles Barber said his group also visits local junior and senior secondary schools on request.

"We keep ourselves as much out of sight as we can, because our total goal is to help the kid," Callbeck said.

The High-Pitched Blitz That Doesn't Work

Davis Denies Picking On City Over Water

Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis wasn't picking on Victoria when he ordered the Greater Victoria Water Board to provide water for Goldstream to enable the salmon to spawn.

The minister in a telephone interview from Ottawa said today his department plans to crack down on other communities.

"We are aware that other streams have problems and we intend to inform those responsible to do something to improve the situation," he said.

He was replying to a charge Saturday by Mayor Courtney Haddock that he (the minister) was engaging in a "childish political ploy".

The mayor said he was angry at the minister for sending him a letter insisting that water be provided for the spawning salmon when the board had already taken action to save the fish.

The minister's letter was sent from Ottawa on Nov. 4, the day water commissioner Ron Upward announced water would be released into Goldstream.

Davis said the letter was not intended to be made public.

"I had nothing to do with the release of the letter," he said. "It was meant to inform the mayor of the provisions of the Fisheries Act.

★ ★ ★

It was sent after senior fisheries officials had studied the Goldstream problem and had conferred with Upward.

Department officials believed water could be spared and that the board had forgotten in its long range water conservation plans to provide for the needs of the salmon.

"The trouble is in the past the act has not been enforced as it should have been," Davis said. "This has not been the fault of senior fisheries officials, but the lack of 'political will' to see that its provisions are carried out."

Under the act, he said, fish have priority over water.

It was passed years ago when there was not the demand for water as there is today, he explained. It gave the government wide powers.

B.C. Labor Official Resigns

The provincial labor department's registrar has resigned, deputy minister William Sands said today, but a reliable source said Ewan Rowntree was forced to quit.

Rowntree, who was contacted at home, said only that he is no longer with the department.

Rowntree's lawyer is working on the case.

Sands said Rowntree resigned Nov. 10, that he received notice of resignation, and the Civil Service Commission now is looking for a replacement.

"What his reasons may be I have no knowledge," Sands said.

Rowntree, who is a lawyer, had been registrar for about five years.

City Hall Heeds Plea For Traffic Reform

City hall today offered to take the first step in a new start on planning transportation and land use for the whole region.

Council's B Committee reacted to a report from the city's traffic department which was described as a "desperate plea for political leadership" in a problem the regional district has been unequipped to deal with.

The committee promised to ask the provincial government to combine its resources with Victoria's and decide how to proceed.

Traffic engineer David Campbell's report called for improved mass transit systems, and rejection of freeway plans in favor of an improved arterial street system.

EIGHT YEARS LEFT

Campbell said that the region has about eight years in which to find new solutions, before all current traffic space is used up.

At the suggestion of City Manager Dennis Young, the committee decided to revive a motion that has been lying on the council table to ask the province's co-operation.

Young said that the region is not equipped to handle such a study and that nothing will be done about the problem until someone decides to "pick it up and carry the ball."

Ald. Peter Pollen, describing the problem as the "most vital" in the area, commented: "We haven't got eight years — eight years is when the whole damned thing grinds to a stop."

The city's intention is not to do a whole study itself but to join the provincial government in deciding how the regional government should approach the whole problem, Young said.

The regional government at present is "spread too thin" to be able to tackle the problem itself, he said.

The ultimate effect will probably be to update an earlier transportation study done by the region in co-operation with the four core municipalities.

Campbell said that any real study would take four or five years to complete, but Victoria still has time before a high degree of congestion takes place.

"I think Victoria's at a point when we could become a model for North America," he said.

Such things as express buses and development of offices on the perifery of the downtown core would be approaches to the problem, he said.

Teachers 88% For Striking

Teachers throughout the province are 88 per cent in favor of strike action to get a better pension plan from the provincial government.

The results of the Oct. 30 vote released today by the B.C. Teachers Federation closely followed earlier indications of support when a province-wide straw vote was conducted.

Locally, the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association was 83 per cent in favor. The teachers had been 84.4 per cent in favor in the straw vote.

★

"We achieved what we wanted to achieve as far as solidarity," said Les Isaacson, president of the GVTA.

Isaacson said negotiations are continuing.

He is attending an executive meeting of the BCTF in Vancouver over the weekend at which time the vote will probably be discussed.

Premier Bennett said Oct. 22 that pensions will be "greatly increased" next year for teachers, civil servants and municipal employees but did not disclose the amount.

Manpower Head Speaks Thursday

Canada Manpower manager George Bevis will speak Thursday on Victoria's unemployment problems.

Bevis will also outline new federal programs aimed at helping workers find jobs.

Bevis' talk will be at 2 p.m. in the Midgley room of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

Business agents, union executives, apprenticeship committees, and others have been invited.

Strike Vote Set For Bus Drivers

Bus drivers and mechanics at B.C. Hydro and Power Authority in the Victoria and Vancouver areas will hold a strike vote Thursday and Friday.

The move was announced today by John Harlow, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union local representing the 1,720 drivers and mechanics who man and service urban buses.

In a statement, Harlow said while negotiations have been in progress since late August including the last 10 days under mediation officer Gus Leonidas, "limited progress has been made."

The union's advisory board "has repeatedly advised the Hydro that our membership is in no mood for protracted and long-drawn-out discussions that weren't going to produce some realistic progress. Wages and other matters are still in dispute."

The last contract expired Oct. 31 and provided $3.75 an hour for drivers and $4.35 an hour for mechanics.

The dispute affects 220 union members in the Victoria area. They will vote on a strike on Friday, Harlow said.

Freak Mishap Victim Still Poor

Wayne Joseph Renshaw, the Squamish teen-ager who lay in the bush four hours after apparently being seriously injured in a freak traffic accident, is still in poor condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The 17-year-old youth was believed to have been struck by a car that went out of control and hit a power pole while he was walking in the 500 block of Goldstream in the Colwood area.

While police and ambulance attendants assisted passengers in the car to hospital, Renshaw was apparently overlooked as he lay under a bush just three feet from the accident scene.

He was later rescued by residents of the area who heard his groans. Renshaw was suffering head injuries and a broken leg.

Rink Next to Arena Studied

A full-sized ice rink beside Memorial Arena will be the subject of a feasibility study asked for Monday by the Victoria recreation and community services committee.

Preliminary cost estimates and sketches were introduced at the committee meeting by Ald. Ove Witt, who called for the city's and community's help in financing, and handed a personal cheque for $100 to the city comptroller.

Witt said the rink could be built on the rocky ground adjacent to the arena for about $175,000, taking advantage of the arena's equipment, a new rink elsewhere could cost about $400,000, he said.

City manager Dennis Young said it would be unrealistic at this time to expect the city to pay half the cost.

But Witt said he only wanted to see a start on the idea. He said the youngest of the organized hockey players have had to be cut from the arena's practice schedules this year because of the demands on the rink.

A new rink would not have spectator seating, but it would double the practice time available.

IF COURAGE, STAMINA and specialized skill can accomplish the seemingly impossible, those two American climbers on Yosemite's El Capitan will soon top that appalling tower. When they do, or if they do, a question already asked by would-be rescuers will be raised again.

Why did they have to climb it?

The classic answer is "Because it's there."

I suspect, though, that the reply once given by a mountaineer to an uninfected enquirer is the sort a man tosses off in order to spare himself the thankless task of trying to explain the not wholly explainable.

It is also an over-simplification. El Capitan is not only there: it has been climbed before. If I remember rightly, a Sierra Club team pioneered the first ascent years ago. Other gifted rock-scramblers have followed.

Logically, a peak or a pinnacle once scaled should hold no further challenge. It's still there, to be sure, but it has been conquered. That should be sufficient.

Do such men entertain a subconscious death-wish? That question has also been asked before. Germany between wars had an elite of young "suicide climbers" who tackled such pitches as the frightful north face of the Eigerwand like Seigfrieds over-eager for Valhalla. English mountainer and poet Geoffrey Winthrop Young asks, "What remains of all I see and know — If I let go?"

It's possible that in some climbers, something of the sort may lurk. But I've never encountered it in my limited hobnobbings with mountaineers, and I very much doubt that the pair on El Capitan entertain any such wish.

Mountaineers as I've observed them accepted the risk factor involved in their sport, but frowned on recklessness. They knew what they were about, even though that fact might be lost on the novice who glimpsed only space between his feet. It was no part of their plan to die on the heights.

Nor did they climb mountains merely from a spirit of conquest. Laurence Grassi, one of Canada's finest climbers in his time, explained that to me once on a Coast Range glacier.

Take himself, for instance, he said. He climbed because he felt better, and keener, and more alive on a mountain than he did anywhere else.

He cupped a match against the glacier wind, and puffed on the gnawed cigar that was the companion of his waking hours. Another thing. A man with his boots on a mountain doesn't bring his low-country worries along with him. The mountain won't let him. It fills his thoughts, and if the climb is a hard one, it demands absolute concentration.

Absolute teamwork, too. It is not enough just to concentrate on your own moves. You must give thought to the others in the party.

And because of these things, the man who comes down off a mountain may be tired, but he is also refreshed in a way that is hard to explain. The mountain has taken from him, and it has given in return.

What Grassi said helps explain why two men, skilled specialists in the rock-climber's craft, should choose to play human fly for days and weeks on a new route up an ancient monolith.

It's a cruel, if self-imposed testing. But the hardship and the risk which can only be minimized to a degree are more than means to an end for them.

While they're roped on El Capitan, they are living life at a pitch of intensity that men captivated by mountains do not achieve on horizontal earth.

Slowly add liquid, stirring constantly until smooth. Bring to a boil; cook 2 minutes. Cut mandarin segments in half; add to gravy along with remaining ingredients. Simmer about 3 minutes longer. A goal of 750,000 letters to government officials is the reason two members of Pensioners Concerned (Canada) are undertaking a cross-country tour.

Carabel Penfold, president, and Reg Watson, vice-president met with the Silver Threads in Victoria Monday. They are on the first lap of their tour which involves speaking to groups of people on fixed incomes in 80 cities across Canada.

The goal was actually set by Edgar Benson, minister of Finance. He said that if he received the magic total of 750,000 letters he would not only have to reply but act.

Donald S. MacDonald, minister of National Defence, told them that "form letters and petitions go straight into the waste basket but that individual letters are never ignored."

Pensioners Concerned is asking people on fixed incomes to write personal letters to their federal MP, provincial MLA and their alderman explaining how taxes and inflation are robbing them of their dignity through no fault of their own.

Mrs. Penfold said the group was founded in 1969 at a Toronto social club when the members "let down their hair," and admitted how their incomes, believed sufficient at one time, had dwindled due to inflation and higher taxes.

Members of the founding group had all been retired less than five years. They wondered how others, who might have retired 20 years ago, were managing to meet the unexpected shrinkage of their income.

"We found some people who had worked for 30 to 50 years and saved what they considered a sufficient sum for the rest of their lives in desperate circumstances," said Mrs. Penfold.

In their campaign the members have done endless research, spoken to hundreds of groups in the Toronto area, and answered thousands of letters asking for information.

Pensioners Concerned is hoping to establish a group of volunteers on Vancouver Island to carry on the informational work by speaking to retired groups.

The group charges no fee but asks that those writing for information enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. "At first we paid the postage ourselves said Mrs. Penfold, "but when the letters mounted into the thousands we couldn't manage it any longer on our incomes."

They have presented a brief to the Toronto and District Liberal Association which was accepted. They have now been asked to present the brief at the national policy convention of the Liberal party in Ottawa this week.

The brief requests that federal, provincial and municipal governments: Take action to increase the income tax exemption for persons on fixed incomes to $3000 for single persons and $4,500 for couples.

Provide either a negative income tax or a supplement to the old age security payments to bring the income of people below these levels up to the required amount.

Exempt the retired and their spouses from capital gains tax.

The provincial governments are asked to: Provide health services for those above this level at a cost equivalent to the average cost of group insurance plans in existence prior to Medicare.

Extend the coverage of health services to cover all items covered under the group plans such as prescription drugs, vaccines, oxygen and care in government approved nursing homes.

Both provincial and municipal levels are asked to exempt all retired people and their spouses from education taxes on lived in homes or rented premises.

Mrs. Penfold has no idea how many letters have been sent at her urging. Her MP Bob Kaplin, Don Valley, Toronto, reported receiving 800 letters from his constituents after one of her talks.

Mrs. Penfold feels this is most significant as Kaplin represents a wealthy riding. "The need in more depressed areas must be far greater," she said.

Any one wishing to assist in the campaign should write to Pensioners Concerned Canada, 37 Randolph Rd., Toronto 17, Ontario, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I would love to make scarves for gifts for my friends as well as for myself. The ones you buy are so costly and surely they can't be too difficult to make.

Would you please tell me why some patterns call for a scarf to be cut on the bias which takes so much more fabric than one that is cut straight?

Mrs. K. G.

Dear Mrs. K. G.

If you will look at the ready-made scarves, you will find that there is a wide variation in the way they are cut. Some are cut double on the straight grain of the fabric, some are just a single layer, and others are cut on the bias.

Naturally, a scarf that has been cut on bias will mould around the neckline much better, however, they tend to look very skimpy if they aren't cut wide enough. I think a bias scarf should be as least 7 inches wide when finished.

Today, scarves are such grand accessories; they can be used as ties around the waistline as well as the neck. Be sure to make them long enough, in any event, for that new look.

Priorities Ignore Reason

Priorities. I'm at a loss to explain why one person can feel so strongly that a new power tool, or a plant is so important that he should raid the grocery money to get hold of it.

How does this come about? It's not quite so extreme as the drinker who polishes off his pay cheque on pay day and has nothing to take home to the little woman and the kids, but it is almost as bad.

I know one man who insisted his family needed a swimming pool. He took the money they had saved toward a side of beef and, buying all the cement and stuff, whipped up a pool in the time it takes to tell the tale.

Then, rather than take up vegetarianism, he shot a bloated cow for a neighbor and kindly offered to bury it. Before the burial, as you've probably guessed, a little carving took place.

I know that when I went to school, at age 20, my budget was $100 a month, all inclusive. This sounds like a lot, but books being as expensive as they are, I ate a lot of macaroni.

Yet I remember taking a taxi a few times when I felt particularly pooped. I lived right on a bus line, too. Priorities.

One thing I've noticed is that people get very cross at you, as if you've offended them, if your priorities are different from theirs. I find myself irrationally cheesed off with someone if he buys a new chesterfield before re-roofing his house when he can't afford a roof and a chesterfield.

What's that got to do with me? Nothing. But I would have ranked those items differently, so I expect him to, too.

I have heard that whether a person is in the $5,000 a year bracket, or in the $10,000 a year or $15,000 a year groups (three distinct "levels of income) he still spends about 75 per cent of his income on basic necessities: housing, clothing food.

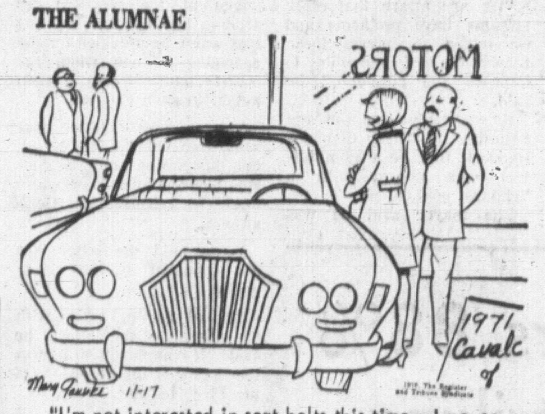

Those in the lowest group spend more proportionately on food, but this is levelled out by those in the highest group who spend more on housing.

This only leaves a quarter of the salary for us to "play around" with. And unforseen health or transportation problems can soon boggle that up.

I'd say a young couple considering marriage would do well to check out each other's priorities. What are your values? What do you want most out of life? I don't really think a grasshopper and an ant can get along too happily.

If you have any thoughts or questions on this topic or any other, please drop me a line, care of the Times.

Trudeau Called 'Brilliant, ... Supremely Egotistical'

By ANNE DUNSMUIR

The people of Canada are living under a revolutionary government and don't seem to know it, a leading Ottawa journalist told the Victoria Women's Canadian Club Monday.

Charles Lynch, chief of Ottawa news services for Southam newspapers, was scheduled to speak on The Shape of Things to Come.

Instead, he spoke almost entirely on a man who obviously fascinates and repels him: Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

"His opinions on everything were formed before he took office. He is the master of the put-down. His technique both in the House of Commons and out of it is to make anyone who questions him appear ridiculous.

"Arguing with him is like arguing religion with a Jesuit. You know nothing you say will change his opinions."

Describing the present federal government as "revolutionary," Lynch listed a few of its changes that he feels would have led to uprisings in many countries.

He said that Trudeau had:

Tried to alter the relationship with the crown in favor of republicanism.

Revolutionized the public service so that most Canadians outside Quebec have a limited future in government work unless they can become bilingual.

Questioned and altered all of Canada's former relationships and alliances such as NATO.

Insisted on free trade with the communist world.

Revolutionized the criminal code.

Changed and denigrated the armed forces to a point where in the recent FLQ crisis it was doubted that enough troops could be found to help the police.

Lynch described one "intimate little dinner with the PM" for a flattered group of press people. They were invited because Trudeau, who gives no interviews and cannot be approached in the corridors like his predecessors, wanted to gauge opinion.

There was no small talk. Each man was asked his opinion, which was then ruthlessly demolished.

"He left us all feeling like two cents," said Lynch. Usually, he said, Trudeau regards press interest in public affairs as an intrusion.

"I call it propaganda," he said. "It may mean more news for the people but it won't be good news—it can't be anything but propaganda."

He felt that it is not snooping for the press to take an interest in the prime minister's whereabouts.

"Trudeau told us that the press of affairs would not permit him to attend de Gaulle's funeral," he said. "Then he disappeared for the entire weekend and no one knew where he was. If this had happened four weeks earlier we would all have thought he had been kidnapped by the FLQ."

Lynch believes that Trudeau was lucky in his timing when he made his bid for power—just as the youth culture hit its peak.

CHARLES LYNCH

"At any other time in Canadian politics a man with his obsession for youth would have appeared ridiculous," he said.

He wondered how the prime minister, with his extreme vanity" over personal appearance and athletic abilities, would be affected when he finally had to admit he was over the hill.

"Trudeau hates the House of Commons and spends as little time as he can in it," said Lynch.

"There is a tendency to bypass the House, and to emphasize the party caucus rather than the cabinet as the decision-making body."

"Don't doze off on this guy," Lynch warned. "His decisions affect every Canadian"

"I think it is a miracle that a strong federalist from Quebec is in power at this time. I believe he took the right action (over the FLQ). I don't like seeing troops in the streets of my city but I'm glad they are our troops."

Reserving final judgment, Lynch suggested that "the history of these days may tell that Pierre Elliott Trudeau was the right man in the right place at the right time."

It is hardly surprising that he chose to speak on the character of a man he admits he cannot understand, rather than attempting to predict the shape of things to come at that man's hands.

Canadian Nursing Impresses Visitors

OTTAWA (CP) — Two nurses from India and one from Nigeria, visiting Canada for two months on fellowships from the World Health Organization, hope to take some new ideas home.

Mary Clara Xavier, 50, of Lucknow, is assistant superintendent of nursing services for the state of Uttar Pradesh in Indian. She is mostly concerned with recruiting candidates for general nurses' training and supervising training programs for nursing and midwifery students.

"The purpose of the fellowship is to allow me to observe administrative nursing services and education programs for nurses at basic, post-basic and graduate levels so that when I go back to my country I may be able to use some of my experiences to better the nursing services in my country," she said.

Her counterpart from Ahmedabad, India, Mrs. Kanchan Surenda Shah, 42, and Mrs. O. A. Adewole of Lagos, a nursing officer in Nigeria's federal health ministry, are the two other nurses on fellowships.

Wearing a flowing, brown-and-yellow "jro" and a matching "gele" or hat, Mrs. Adewole said she is greatly impressed by Canadian nursing. Like Miss Xavier, she was trained in England and this contributed to her desire to visit Canada.

During their stay in Ottawa, the visitors met federal health officials and toured the offices of the Canadian Nurses Association. They will go to Toronto and Montreal before spending a further two months in the UnitedStates.

Will Information Show Liberals 'A Good Thing?'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau opened Information Canada's national inquiry centre Monday, and said young people who used it to keep informed would "know it is a good thing to vote Liberal."

After Robert Stanbury suggested he had said "the wrong thing," Trudeau said he meant that "more objective information" would bring people to the "this objective conclusion"—that one should vote Liberal.

Women Get Vote In Zurich

ZURICH (Reuter) — Swiss women moved a step nearer to being able to vote in national elections Sunday when men in the Zurich canton district agreed to give them suffrage in cantonal affairs.

In a referendum, a total of 115,839 men voted for the proposal and 57,010 against.

A national referendum is scheduled to be held next year on a government proposal—already approved by both houses of parliament—to give women the vote at federal level.

DEFENCE OF CAPE ROUTE 'VITAL'

Arms Should Go to S. Africa—Heath

By LESLIE HAYNES

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Heath Monday night defended the right of Britain to supply arms to South Africa, but he did not say whether it will.

Heath, making the traditional prime minister's speech on foreign affairs at the lord mayor's banquet, made clear his government's thinking when he said:

"The defence of the great sea route round the Cape of Good Hope is of vital importance to us. This is a joint responsibility of Britain and South Africa under the Simonstown Agreement, concluded in 1955 and maintained by governments of both parties in this country ever since.

"Under these arrangements we have an obligation to supply to South Africa the maritime equipment she requires to fulfil her side of the agreement."

Heath then stressed that it is not the British government's purpose to encourage the South African government in its apartheid policies or to confer on South Africa a degree of international respectability which, it was said, it would not otherwise enjoy.

POLICY 'DETESTABLE'

The British government, he said, believes apartheid is detestable, damaging to all races and doomed to inevitable failure.

"But abhorrence of apartheid is a moral attitude, not a policy, and it is certainly not a categorical imperative against any contact with South Africa and the South Africans.

"There are some who believe that apartheid in South Africa will be brought to an end only by the use of force. This is emphatically not the view of the British government. A racial war in southern Africa, whatever its eventual outcome, would be catastrophic in its consequences for Africa."

Reports that Heath's Conservative government would resume shipments of arms to South Africa has drawn sharp criticism from leaders of the former Labor government and from black African nations in the Commonwealth.

The Canadian government has banned shipment of spare parts for military equipment supplied to South Africa.

ISSUE DISCUSSED

Heath said the British government has been discussing the South Africa issue with other members of the Commonwealth.

"We do not ask them to abandon their principles on apartheid," he added. "On the contrary, we share these principles.

"But we do ask our Commonwealth colleagues to accept that our right to take decisions in pursuance of British interests is no less than theirs to pursue the policies which serve their interests."

Britain's right to make its own decision was the keynote theme at the start of Heath's speech which ranged over the Middle East, Europe, East-West relations, the East of Suez defence issue and South Africa.

"The time has come to establish clearly and unmistakably that British policies are going to be determined by British interests," he said amid cheers.

GOODYEAR

GRAND PRIX RETREADS

Goodyear Grand Prix retreads may be the answer to your winter driving problems, particularly if you own an older car. Can you rely on retreads? You can if they are Goodyear. Bus companies, trucking firms, even airlines use Goodyear factory-built retreads because Goodyear carefully selects each casing before highly trained factory personnel apply the same rubber which is used in new tires. You get a tire that is just like new for a really low price and they are guaranteed too. Traction? The new Grand Prix design wraps around the casing to give a wider tread than older style recaps and more rubber on the road means more traction when the going gets rough. Retreads are available in blackwall and whitewall in all popular sizes.

15.95 6.50-13 BLACKWALL Slightly higher for Whitewalls

LOW PRICES ON OTHER SIZES, TOO!

SURE GRIP IV

We believe the Sure-Grip IV is the best tire in its price range. Four full plies of "stronger than steel" nylon give the best protection against winter road hazards at this price. This tire has also the tread design formerly only available on our higher-priced tires. Its rugged deep tread is the one that made the name Suburbanite synonymous with winter traction. For the first time this year, Sure Grip IV is also available in whitewalls and in sizes to fit most domestic models as well as many "imports". No wonder it's the best winter tire in its price class.

18.95 6.50-13 BLACKWALL Slightly higher for Whitewalls

LOW PRICES ON OTHER SIZES, TOO!

SUBURBANITE VYTACORD

Moderately priced for the motorist who wants a tire that runs quieter, lasts longer. Four plies of polyester cord have all the soft-riding and strength characteristics of nylon, but in addition, they overcome the flat spotting or morning thump problems associated with nylon. The interlocking "S" tread design provides all the "get up and go" traction associated with Suburbanite, but goes further. This is the tire that is all bite and no bark. We think it is the quietest winter tire ever built. Polyester cord, interlocking "S" tread plus a special rubber compound combine to give more traction, more service, than our economy tire. Available in whitewalls and blackwalls in most popular sizes.

26.70 6.45-14 BLACKWALL Slightly higher for Whitewalls

LOW PRICES ON OTHER SIZES, TOO!

SUBURBANITE POLYGLAS

If you own a new car, Polyglas tires are a must for you. They team up with the "extra mileage" Polyglas tires on your front wheels to give safety and traction that lasts and lasts. Polyglas winter tires have the special rubber compound which contributes to greater traction and tread life but, its the "belted construction" of Polyglas tires that really make the difference. Two fiberglas belts keep the quiet interlocking "S" tread firmly on the road reducing squirm which eats away tread. This means more traction longer. Polyglas is built to keep its grip longer than non-belted tires. Available in sizes to fit all standard and high-performance cars. Whitewalls, of course, Polyglas has lots of imitators but if it doesn't say Goodyear, it can't be Polyglas.

32.35 B78-14 (6.45-14) BLACKWALL Slightly higher for Whitewalls

LOW PRICES ON OTHER SIZES, TOO!

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY GOODYEAR TIRES

The market has been flooded with tires at "bargain" prices. Are these tires really bargains? Hard to tell—particularly for the average tire buyer. Terms such as "premium" and "first line" are meaningless. One manufacturer's premium quality tire can be the economy grade of another. Tires can be made to sell at a price. The lower the price, the lower the quality. Cheaper tires are less durable and have less tread and tread depth. You get what you pay for.

Your protection: the company that stands behind the product. Consider Goodyear. Goodyear builds a tire to meet the driving needs of every Canadian motorist whether you need traction or traction plus other features—if it carries the Goodyear name you can be sure it's top value for your tire dollar. Goodyear's reputation has been built by leading the tire industry... bringing new and better products—like Suburbanite and Polyglas—to the motoring public. That's why you can depend on the Goodyear lifetime guarantee. It's honoured by Goodyear dealers everywhere.

GOODYEAR

NO LIMIT LIFETIME GUARANTEE

All new Goodyear auto tires are guaranteed against defects in workmanship and materials and normal road hazards, except repairable punctures.

If a Goodyear tire fails under this guarantee any of more than 80,000 Goodyear dealers in Canada and the United States will make allowance on a new tire based on original tread depth remaining and current "Goodyear Price."

BENSON TRACES WHITE PAPER PROGRESS

'Reform Doesn't Mean More Revenue'

By AB KENT

Tax reform will not precipitate higher tax revenues, Finance Minister Edgar Benson reiterated in speaking Monday to Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce in a packed Empress Hotel ballroom.

The statement, which Benson has made frequently since critics began dissecting his white paper on tax reform, came in an informal address retracing much of the ground covered by recent economic forecasts and white paper discussion to date.

He dropped no tips on what would be included in forthcoming tax reform legislation, which he said would be presented to the Commons in March, April or May. But he did promise that legislation would not simply consist of proposals made in the white paper.

The minister forecast "substantial changes" over the white paper proposals.

The white paper approach to reform he hoped would be a precedent for future finance ministers wishing to change the laws, although it had been difficult to convince Canadians (and the Conservative opposition that proposals were drafted to encourage comment and guide the drafting of legislation.

"I hope we have buried once and for all the idea that when the government brings forward proposals it is the basis for legislation," Benson said.

Each week Benson has been getting an analysis based on private submissions and letters dealing with the white paper, which now number more than 15,000, he told the luncheon.

As legislation is drafted

White Paper 'A Basis For Talk'

there will be taken into consideration, along with the recommendations of two parliamentary committees which held public hearings across Canada during the summer.

The minister said he was surprised by the size of the audience. "I wasn't looking for such a crowd. I thought perhaps 25 or 30 would be here at this point (in discussion about white paper proposals.)"

His listeners could have been potentially hostile in view of earlier protests about the white paper.

Benson apparently was reassuring, evoking only polite questions on tax reform.

If tax reforms are not designed to increase government revenues, why is it necessary to depart from the current tax system? he was asked.

Because there are many things wrong with it, injustices and inequities, Benson replied.

Was it intended to apply a special rate on capital gains spread over three to five years?

Benson answered that he could not even promise there would be a capital gains tax, although he was surprised at the relatively small opposition to this proposal. He also noted the parliamentary committee recommendations on this subject.

Would tax reform reduce

Benson agreed small business needs incentives to permit growth, but finance department staff are still working on the subject and at this point Benson said he could not even define small business. Later he may be required to referee a decision, he said.

Should mortgate interest payments not be deductible in the interests of promoting home ownership?

"I personally do not agree," Benson said.

There also were questions on the economy, and G. Fitzpatrick Dunn, who introduced the minister, asked him to comment on inflation.

Benson was of the opinion that Canada had begun to suffer earlier and took corrective measures sooner than either the U.S. or Europe in the battle of inflation, partly because of this country's heavy reliance on export markets.

Incentives For Small Businesses

As a result, the worst of inflation is over, Benson said, while the U.S. is just coming to the pressure point felt by Canada several months ago. Europe, meanwhile, considers inflation its greatest problem today.

Earlier Benson forecast improved employment and gross national product in 1971, although this winter unemployment would be "much heavier than I would like to see in Canada."

Results of the current business quarter will be "rather flat," he felt, but confidence would grow in the coming year, including the outlook for Quebec.

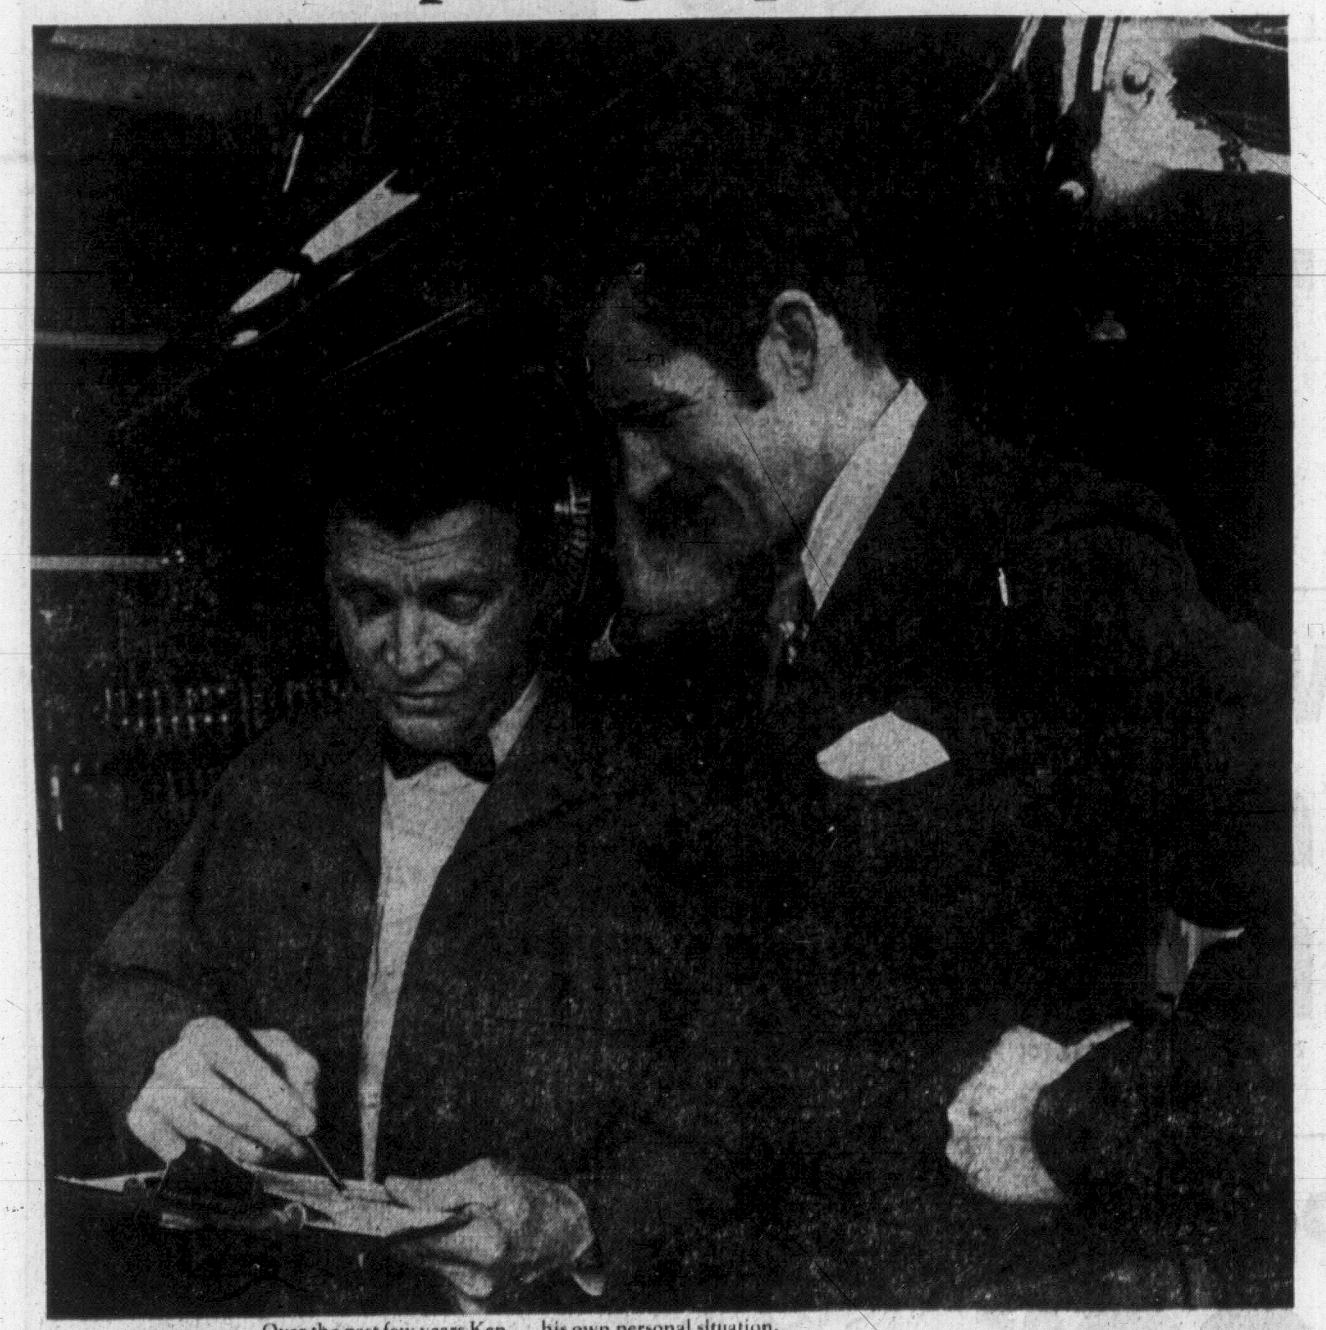

Monetary policy has resulted in a greater money supply for the chartered banks, and "banks should not now have to refuse any justifiable loan," he said, pointing to "very high" bank liquidity of 30 per cent.

Government fiscal policy had turned a $450 million surplus a year ago into a $650 million deficit via government initiatives to give some encouragement to the economy, Benson said. This included $100 million spent since September on housing and $60 million for government programs.

The minister said he would not deal with matters involving proclamation of the War Measures Act, but offered his opinion: "I think it was the right step at the right time and very necessary to maintain confidence" in the Quebec provincial government.

There was a murmur of approval and one of those at the head table muttered "hear, hear."

Finally, with the help of another large repair estimate, Harry convinced Ken to buy a new car.

And we took it from there.

Board Ignores Claim Of Empire Building

Ignoring a charge of "empire building" by one of its members, the Greater Victoria School Board Monday night approved reorganization of the district's building and grounds department.

The move will increase the department's staff by three at a cost of $20,000.

The recommendations came in a report from the building and grounds committee which proposed major reshuffling of the department. Its name will also be changed to the department of construction and maintenance.

The report described the new department as headed by a director with three divisions each with a superviser. The divisions would be titled operations, maintenance and construction.

Trustee Allan McKinnon criticized the plan.

He said he was concerned that everytime the board reorganized it added cost.

He said such reorganization produced a "top-heavy" group of senior staff and added that "there comes a point where we have to stop empire building in this school district headquarters."

Trustee Peter Bunn, buildings and grounds committee chairman, replied that the district has been growing tremendously and although schools and grounds are in good shape they have not been maintained efficiently.

"We feel with increased supervision we can increase productivity," he said.

F. H. Dietze, superintendent of buildings and grounds, said he felt the department was "running very haphazardly" with no school district personnel overlooking construction and maintenance.

He added that there have been periodic checks by buildings and grounds staff but no continuous on-site checking.

With the report implemented this could be done, he said.

Bunn called the report a "housekeeping" procedure and "a courageous move" on the part of the staff because they knew on paper it looked bad.

He pointed out that the department could be compared to a business.

"And we should look as efficient as any contracting firm in town," he added.

Low Bid To Get Pool Art

The artistic embellishments planned for the inside of Victoria's new swimming pool building will go to the lowest bidder, it was decided Monday.

The city's recreation and community services committee balked at the idea of paying a high price for a sculpture and other art works, as suggested by the faculty of art at the University of Victoria.

Architect John Di Castri told the committee he requested the help of university faculty members who said they were interested but thought a nominal fee would limit the value of the art.

Committee member Mike Griffin said the university should show its appreciation to the committee for its help with the university stadium by turning up some low-cost art for the pool.

It was suggested that if Mayor Courtney Haddock, not present at the meeting, wrote to the university president, a better response would be received.

City Manager Dennis Young, however, said perhaps the committee should consider hiring the talented Oak Bay high school art department.

After all, he said, the pool is "youth oriented."

Short Rezoning To Hearing

Saanich council agreed Monday night to hold a public hearing into a bid to switch zoning in the Short Street area, just south of Town and Country Shopping Centre, to residential from commercial.

The move came despite a recommendation from the Saanich Advisory Planning Commission, a council-appointed citizens group, that the rezoning application from Short Street residents be rejected.

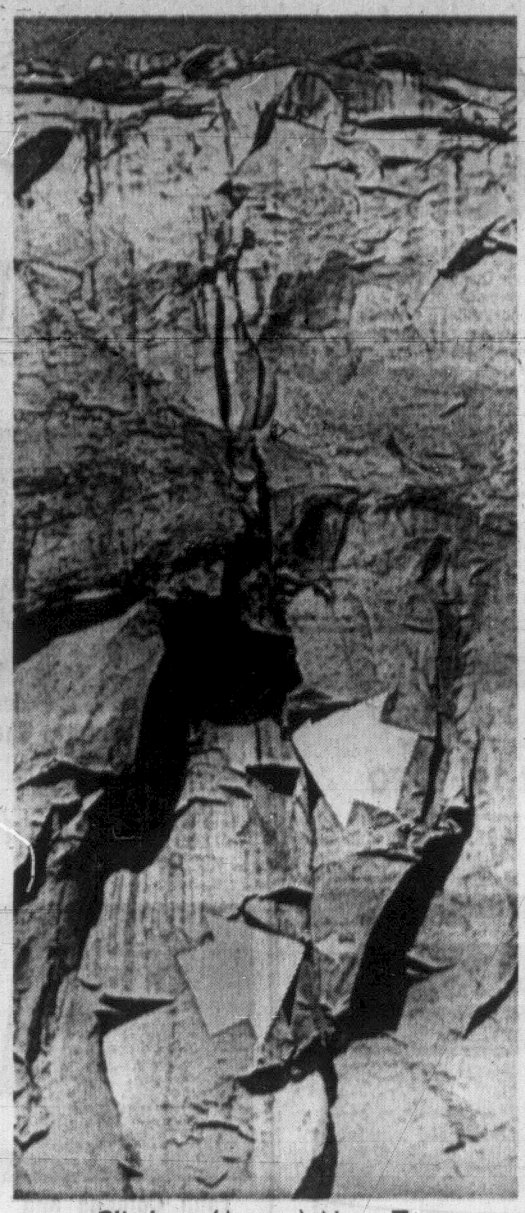

The commission said approval would establish an isolated residential pocket in a large commercial area and the residents are in an area which logically should develop in a commercial way.

Ald. Edith Gunning said the residents want residential zoning for a protection and a public hearing should be held.

The residents have said before that the area was switched from residential to commercial zoning in anticipation of a new highway cutting through to link Douglas Street with the city's Blanshard Street freeway. Since the provincial highways department has dropped these plans, the residents said their homes should regain residential zoning.

In other business, council:

- Awarded the Warren-Douglas sewer contract to low-bidding G. H. Wheaton Ltd. at $66,118;
- Approved its $240 share of a $600 grant to the Victoria Low-Income Group to provide transportation to day care centres;
- Approved its $3,000 share of a $8,000 extra grant to the Greater Victoria Art Gallery;
- Agreed to a local study of unification of certain services — accounting and auditing procedures, standardization of forms, a single purchasing commission, and assessment machinery;

Climbers (Arrows) Near Top

Mountaineers Nearing Top Of El Capitan

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Two mountaineers were within striking distance of El Capitan's summit today after 26 days and almost 3,000 feet of climbing in a vertical world of rock and sky.

They hoped to pull over the final summit overhangs and become the first men to ascend the "Wall of the Morning Light" on the southeast face of the granite monolith towering over Yosemite Valley.

Ground co-ordinators said that even if unexpected difficulties arose the two should finish the ascent by Wednesday.

Several friends headed by trail for the top of El Capitan early today to prepare a welcome feast—fulfilling the climbers's dreams for food.

Monday, Warren Harding, 46, of West Sacramento, Calif. and Dean Caldwell, 27, of Portland, Ore., overcame the last apparent major obstacle—the "Great Roof," a giant overhang that juts 15 feet or more straight out from the rock wall.

That put them at about 2,650 feet—350 feet from the top.

Closure Notices Denied Workers: NDP

TORONTO (CP) — The closing of Ontario branch plants by multi-national corporations continues without due notice to workers although the legislature passed a law five months ago requiring them to do so, says Stephen Lewis, provincial leader of the New Democratic Party.

He said Monday the latest incident is the pending closure of Eaton Automotive Division of Eaton Yale and Towne Canada in London, Ont., which will begin laying off workers Jan. 1, and the closing of its plant next June. The plant employs about 170 men.

At London, Paul A. Miller of Cleveland, Ohio, Eaton group vice-president, said the closing was due to "economic consideration." He said employees will be given consideration for vacancies at other company plants, including Eaton Springs in Chatham, Ont.

The company, which has had manufacturing facilities in Canada since 1911, currently employs about 2,300 at plants at Chatham, Hamilton, London, St. Catharines, Toronto, Scarborough, Wallaceburg and Woodstock.

NOT A SIGN

Mr. Miller said the London shutdown should not be taken as an indication other Canadian facilities owned by the firm would follow suit.

Mr. Lewis said: "The total notice will have been six weeks . . . yet back in June Dalton Bales, minister of labor, introduced Bill 96 . . . to provide, by law, due notice of termination of employment."

The bill, still awaiting proclamation until its regulations have been prepared, provides notice of closing to employees for time periods based on the size of the plant.

Many New Faces Certain In Alberta Legislature

EDMONTON (CP) — As well as death and taxes, there's another thing certain in Alberta—the legislature will have a lot of new faces following the next provincial election.

So far two cabinet ministers, Provincial Treasurer A. O. Aalborg and Mines Minister A. R. Patrick, have announced firm retirement. Dr. J. Donovan Ross, lands and forests minister said he would retire but now is reconsidering.

Two Social Credit MLAs have lost renomination bids, nine others have said they won't seek re-election and one did not seek renomination although he hasn't officially retired. That amounts to 15 familiar faces which may be missing from the government side of the house.

Add 10 new seats created by redistribution and at least one-third of the seats—there will be 75—in the house will have new men in them.

Standings now are Social Credit 55 and Progressive Conservative 10.

While the government hasn't said when the next election will be held, Premier Strom has hinted strongly that it will be next year.

In an interview, Mr. Strom said that traditionally there is an election every four years and "I don't see any reason to change."

The last election was in 1967 when E. C. Manning, now a Senator, led Social Credit to victory. He retired in 1968 and was succeeded by Mr. Strom.

The Social Credit party has been in power in Alberta since 1935 and is the longest-ruling government in Canadian history.

Since the 1967 general election, the Progressive Conservatives have won two byelections, one in Mr. Manning's riding and one in Edson, a former Liberal seat.

They also had their ranks boosted by Clarence Copithorne, who was elected as an independent, and Bill Dickie who moved from the Liberal ranks to leave that party without representation in the house.

Members who have said they won't run again are: Roy Ells, Grouard; Jack Landeryou, Lethbridge; Lee Leavitt, Calgary Queen's Park; Ernie Lee, Dunvegan; Romeo Lamothe, Bonneyville; Chester Sayers, Camrose; Antonio Aloisio, Athabasca; Albert Strohschein, Wetaskiwin, and Ira McLaughlin, Grande Prairie.

Jack Hillman lost the nomination in Sedgewick-Coronation as did Harry Leinweber in Medicine Hat.

Nick Melnyk's riding of Willingdon—Two Hills was eliminated under redistribution to become part of Redwater-Andrew and he didn't seek renomination. He has not yet commented on his plans.

Huge Arms Stockpile Uncovered by Viets

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese troops pushed into northeast Cambodia today and uncovered one of the biggest North Vietnamese ammunition stockpiles of the war.

In South Vietnam, Viet Cong rockets and mortars hit two U.S. bases, killing three Americans and wounding 20. It was the heaviest American toll from rocket and mortar attacks in one day since July 22.

U.S. B—52 bombers and fighter-bombers hammered North Vietnamese supply routes and depots north and south of the 4,500-man South Vietnamese force. But the U.S. command said no direct American support was being provided for the operation 185 miles north of Saigon.

It was the farthest north South Vietnamese troops have ventured into Cambodia since the first U.S. and South Vietnamese drives into the country last May and June. It was also the fourth major South Vietnamese drive into Cambodia in three weeks and raised to 16,000 the number of Saigon troops operating across the border.

"The main reason for the operation is to stop infiltration into South Vietnam and to destroy enemy caches we find," a spokesman said.

New Political Scandal Has Bonn Buzzing

By JOHN M. GOSHKO

BONN (WP) — A federal deputy's charge that rightist politicians had tried to bribe him into defecting from Chancellor Willy Brandt's slim parliamentary majority Saturday has all of Bonn excitedly discussing the "Geldner Affair."

●

The allegations by Karl Geldner, a 43-year-old Bavarian member of the small free democratic party, added up to the juiciest scandal to hit this capital since the famed 1962 "Spiegel Affair," when editors of a leading news magazine were arrested amid charges of betraying West German military secrets.

Ironicall, one of the chief actors in the Spiegel story has now been pushed to the centre of the stage in this latest incident of alleged political intrigue. He is Franz-Josef Strauss, the ever controversial, cigar-chomping leader of the Christian Social Union, the Bavarian wing of the Christian Democratic Opposition. In 1962, Strauss, the defence minister in the then Christian Democratic government, was the target of still hotly debated charges that he instigated the arrest of the Spiegel editors and then lied about his role to the Bundestag (the lower house of parliament).

Friday, Geldner alleged that Strauss and other CSU leaders had tried to influence the breakup of the coalition between Brandt's Social Democrats and the Free Democrats by enticing him through "perfidious methods" to quit his party for the CSU. Had Geldner defected, the government's parliamentary majority would have been cut from six votes to four.

Geldner's accusations, made after he allegedly pretended to go along with the scheme in order to obtain evidence of the opposition's methods, have touched off a veritable whirlwind of charges and counter-charges from every corner of the West German political spectrum.

And, in addition to providing grist for Bonn's political gossip mills, they could have a big effect on the state elections scheduled for Nov. 22 in Bavaria.

In those elections, no one has any doubt that the CSU, with its strong following among Bavaria's conservative and rural Catholic voters, will come out on top. But, at a time when the fragility of Brandt's majority in the federal parliament makes every state contest something of a test of the coalition's stability, the showings made by the two government parties will be watched closely.

●

Originally, it was unhappiness among right-wing Free Democrats over Scheel's identification with Brandt's eastern policy that set the stage for the alleged attempt to lure Geldner out of the party. Three conservative Free Democratic deputies defected to the Christian Democrats last month, and the opposition has made no secret of its hope that more will follow.

According to Geldner's story, the opposition attempted to hasten the process where he was concerned through highly dubious means. He claims to have been given a written assurance from Strauss and the CSU parliamentary leader, Richard Steucklen, that if he switched sides, he would be guaranteed re-election to the Budestag as a CSU deputy.

In addition, Gledner charged that he was given a lucrative business consultant contract with a firm headed by a leading figure in the National Liberal Alliance, a new political group dominated by breakaway rightists from the Free Democrats.

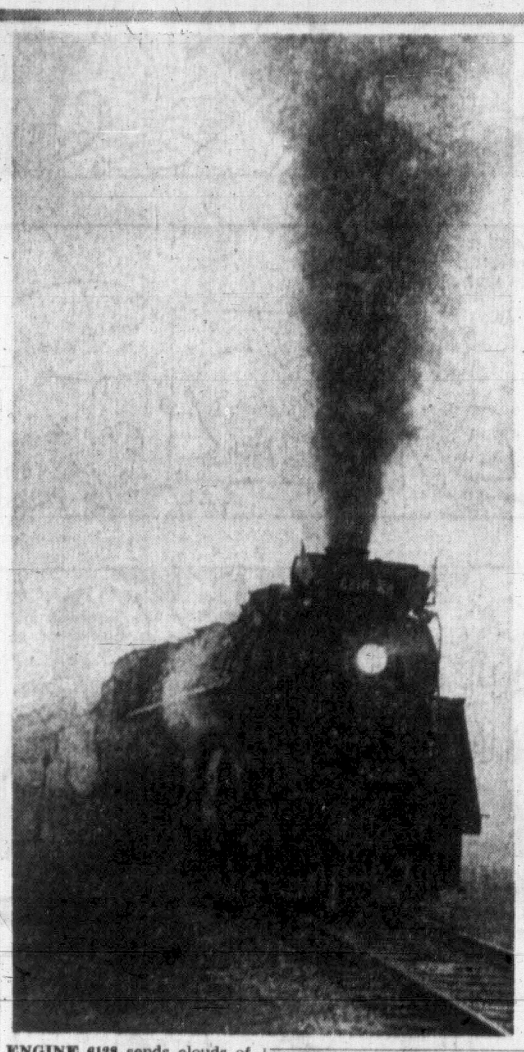

There have been persistent rumors in Bonn political circles that the NLA has temporarily been working behind the scenes with the CSU, and, although Geldner stopped short of saying so outright, the implication of his charges was that the consultant contract was an inducement for him to join Strauss's party.

●

Strauss Saturday dismissed Geldner as a practitioner of "hoodlum and gangster tactics." Stuecklen also released a detailed and heated denial in which he attacked Geldner as "no longer worthy to sit in the parliament."

While freely conceding that the CSU had been willing to welcome Geldner into its fold and to "do everything possible to assure his re-election," Stuecklen contended that Geldner had taken the initiative in approaching him and saying that he wanted to switch parties.

As to the suggestion of financial bribery, Stuecklen said: "In no instance and at no time did the CSU promise Geldner a single pfennig for his changeover."

$3 BILLION PROJECT WITH 1990 FINISH DATE

Proposal for Second Panama Canal Expected

WASHINGTON (WP) — A blue-ribbon presidential panel is expected to recommend that the United States construct a new canal across the Isthmus of Panama to carry shipping between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

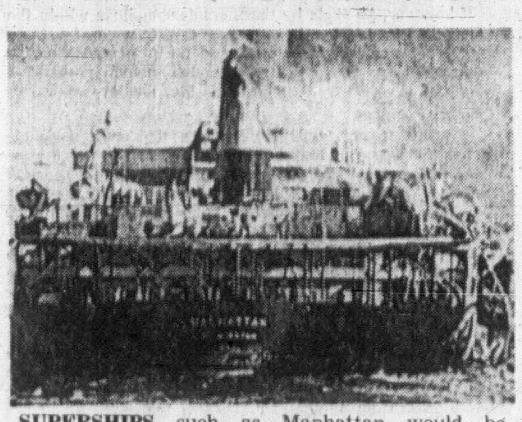

The Atlantic-Pacific Interoceanic Canal Study Commission, which was appointed by President Johnson in April, 1965, to explore the feasibility of a second Panama Canal, will pass on to President Nixon on Dec. 1 its recommendation that the nation spend $3 billion dollars constructing a sea level Atlantic-to-Pacific canal that could be ready to handle shipping by the year 1990.

While commission officials refused to comment on their recommendations, it is understood they will offer the president the option of constructing a second canal inside the U.S. leased Panama Canal Zone or just outside the canal zone through land held by the Republic of Panama.

Each option has sizable disadvantages to it, though both would require spending the same sums on canals almost identical in size — 40 miles long, about 600 feet wide and 60 feet deep.

The disadvantage of a second canal inside the canal zone is that it would require the eventual destruction of the present Panama Canal.

A second canal zone canal would intersect the present canal several times, and since the new canal would be a sea level canal it would mean that the lake which makes up the heart of the present canal would have to be drained. The lake stands 85 feet above sea level.

SUPERSHIPS such as Manhattan would be accommodated by a new canal which would be 600 feet wide, 60 feet deep and 40 miles long.

The main disadvantage to a canal outside the canal zone is that it would run through the Republic of Panama, raising questions of ownership, royalty payments, construction delays motivated by politics and even disruptive riots like those that rocked Panama in 1964.

There is another obstacle to a sea level canal that has nothing to do with where it is built.

A sea level canal means mixing the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific in a location where they have never been mixed before, which raises scientific questions that are certain to rage on long after such a canal is built.

Some scientists feel that a sea level canal means certain death for many marine species in both oceans, either from unfamiliar predators who make their way from the other ocean or from sudden temperature changes that result from a mixing of the colder Pacific with the warmer Atlantic.

The presidential panel studying a second canal has looked into this question and claims it is not half as serious as many scientists make it sound.

"The Battelle Memorial Institute has evaluated these dangers," a source close to the commission said, "and has found no direct evidence that a sea level canal might harm marine life."

Despite all the obstacles, the commission is understood to feel that a second canal must be built to accommodate the growing numbers of large ships in the world's merchant fleets and in our own navy.

The present canal cannot handle ships larger than 65,000 tons, which means it cannot accommodate most of the supertankers being built today. The present canal is also unable to take on the large U.S. aircraft carriers, whose decks are too wide for the canal's system of locks.

HOME GARDEN

Hardiness Unpredictable

By HILDA BEASTALL

Winter hardiness of shrubs is a variable and almost unpredictable thing. Unless a given plant is known to be what we loosely call "bone hardy" in our general area (meaning hardy through to its core) it should have reservations attached to its hardiness. It may be hardy in one garden but not in another a block away.

Hilda

The reason is so simple it almost escapes us. Each garden has its own microclimate (or "little" climate) created by its location, its altitude, the buildings on the property, and the shrubs and trees already growing there. Or, conversely, the absence of them.

This last is often the cause of difficulties in getting a new, bare-lot property started with the plants the owner wants.

He may, if his lot is fully exposed to the elements, need to compromise by first planting some of the "bone-hardies" to give a little protection to his choicer things while they are young.

When established, well furnished with mature growth and making less new growth each year, they will be somewhat hardier.

Then the gardener may if careful evaluation warrants it, remove some of the bone hardy sheltering material.

If however, he finds by thermometer readings within the garden that the shelter is providing a difference of 5 to 10 degrees between the unsheltered and the protected area, he would be wise to leave well enough alone. perhaps a reduction in branch structure of the shelter would be sufficient.

A south facing wall may not be the most desirable location for a shrub known to be of borderline hardiness. While it may grow and flower well for two or three years of favorable winters and springs, a time may come when the warmth of the wall encourages early growth to its own detriment.

Growth starting in a mild spell in March could easily be damaged in April or even May by late frosts. And at the other end of the season, the warmth of the wall in September and October would encourage continued growth instead of hardening the summer's growth.

This is why an experienced grower will plant some of his more tender shrubs in a northern exposure. They will become dormant earlier in fall, get a later start in spring, and make slower growth during summer.

While this may not add up to prolific blooming with some less hardy shrubs, it presents a point of culture worth consideration by experimenting gardeners.

There is a primitive satisfaction in outwitting the elements that justifies these efforts.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In today's deal, which arose in a recent team-of-four match, both South declarers had the opportunity of showing off their technique. Sitting South, at the two different tables, were Don Krauss of Los Angeles and Ken Barnour, of Boston. The deal came up in the 1970 Summer National Championships.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♡	Pass	5 NT
Pass	6 ◇	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

The bidding at both tables was identical, with six spades becoming the final contract. Had the opening lead been a heart, the contract would almost surely have been defeated, since declarer would probably have taken the (losing) heart finesse, and then tried to catch the trump queen by playing the king and ace (thereby making a winner out of East's queen). However, at each table West made the normal opening lead of the club queen.

The opening club lead was captured by the board's ace, after which a diamond was played to South's ace. A trump was then led to dummy's king, and a second diamond was ruffed by South. In order to get to dummy again, South led his king of clubs, which he trumped with the board's remaining trump.

A third diamond lea was now made, South ruffing. Declarer noted with satisfaction that both opponents had followed suit to all three diamond leads, indicating that the seven outstanding diamonds had been divided 4-3.

Declarer, next cashed the ace of trumps, after which he surrendered a trump to East's queen. East returned a club, which South ruffed.

Now came a heart to the board's ace, and the king of diamonds was cashed, felling the sole outstanding diamond (West's jack). On the diamond king, South discarded the heart 10, and on the fifth diamond he tossed away the heart jack. The rest of the tricks belonged to him.

Trick by trick, and card for card, the above is the way the play went at each of the two tables. If it had turned out that the adversely held diamonds had divided badly (5-2 instead of 4-3), then each of the declarers, as a last resort, would have fallen back on the heart finesse.

Divorce Order to Aid Ex-Husband

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A woman has been ordered to pay her former husband $25 a week in child support.

Circuit Court Judge William Gramling directed Monday that Mary Russell pay William Moes to help raise their four children who range in age from 7 to 16.

Mrs. Russell, 38, received a divorce in 1968 on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. Moes was given custody of the children.

In his petition, Moes said he was laid off from his $115 a week job and was working as a bartender at $2 an hour.

EDMONTON SIDEWALKS SKATING RINK

EDMONTON (CP) — Many persons who walk to work used the roadway rather than the sidewalks Monday after heavy overnight rain turned much of Edmonton into a skating rink.

"It covers the whole of the city," a police spokesman said, "and the accidents are starting to come in just now."

Only main streets in the downtown area had been sanded by 6 a.m. MST, leaving most sidewalks and side streets in hazardous condition.

SEA CREATURE JUST BASKING SHARK

SCITUATE, Mass. (AP) — The remains of a giant sea creature which washed ashore near here and for a time defied classification were identified tentatively today by an oceanographic expert as those of a basking shark.

Thousands of spectators lined rocky Mann Hill beach Sunday after the creature rolled to the shore on a high tide and touched off reports that the remains of a "sea serpent" had been found.

Andrew Konnerth, a research associate at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, said after an inspection today that the creature was a basking shark, largest of the Atlantic sharks.

They attain a length of 40 feet.

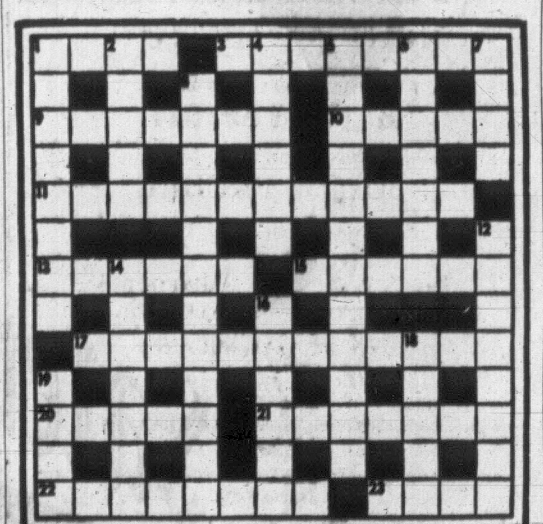

The creature which washed ashore was 28 feet long, although observers said its tail appeared to have been cut off and that its actual length could have been as much as 40 feet.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

B.C. MAN TAKEN BY BRASS 'GOLD'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police say two con artists fleeced a Vancouver man of $5,000 in a scheme involving 10 fake gold bars.

Police said Monday the 61-year-old man — whose name was not released — was approached by a fat man who claimed to be a gold miner. He told the victim he had been stealing gold and it had been melted into bars to be sold.

Another man posing as a New York businessman showed up and offered to buy the bars for $3 an ounce. When the phoney buyer said he did not have enough cash to make a suitable deposit, the victim was persuaded to put up $5,500 — nearly all of his savings — with a promise that he would receive 10 per cent interest and a $500 bonus.

The fake bars — actually gold painted brass — were left with the victim as security. When the con men did not return as scheduled, the victim called police.

ART RECOVERED

PARIS (AP) — Police announced today the recovery of the 17 Impressionist paintings of the Caillebotte collection stolen last July. They were left in a subway entrance and an anonymous telephone call directed police to them.

The paintings, which included seven Renoirs, were packed in cardboard boxes and reported in good condition.

Some experts estimated the value of the paintings at $1.8 million. In addition to the Renoirs, they included three Pissarros, two Monets, a Carot and a Manet.

POLICE PROTEST

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A children's book illustrated with animals dressed as people has been removed from Toledo public school libraries because a policeman protested a drawing that shows pigs dressed as policemen.

The book, Sylvester and the Magic Pebble, is designed for children in the first three grades. All the characters are animals.

COLD REMEDY

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A daily dose of Vitamin C is a good way to keep from catching colds, says Linus Pauling, twice winner of the Nobel Prize.

The Stanford University scientist told a news conference Monday he has been taking a concentrated Vitamin C pill at a cost of about a penny a day.

"I've been doing this for about four years, and it's about four years since I've had a bad cold," he added.

Pauling won the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1954 and for peace in 1963. He has been active in the peace movement.

Scandal Defendant 'Adopts' Two Sons

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of Argyll, a 56-year-old grandmother and the defendant in one of British society's most scandalous post-war divorce cases, says she has adopted two young boys.

"The Gardners are relatively poor," said the duchess, "and I can give the children many things which they could not afford."

"I have signed away my rights as a mother," said Mrs. Gardner, "but we are happy with the arrangements. The boys are also happy."

The duchess said the adoption was a "private arrangement between myself, the parents and my lawyers." The home office said that to be recognized by law, such private adoptions must be approved by a court.

The legal battle between the Duke and Duchess of Argyll lasted nearly 3½ years and was estimated to have cost £50,000 (then about $150,000), the most costly divorce action in Scottish history. Mr. Justice Lord Wheatley in 1963 found the duchess had committed adultery with at least four men, called her a "completely promiscuous woman whose sexual appetite could only be satisfied by a number of men," and granted the duke a divorce.

She was the duke's third wife. They had no children, but her daughter by her first marriage to broker-sportsman Charles Sweeny is the Duchess of Rutland, the mother of two sons and a daughter.

Sort Out Good From Bad

DUBLIN (AP) — On this Emerald Isle, where the banks didn't handle money for six months, they are sorting out the bad guys from the good guys.

The baddies are those who wrote bad cheques during the 25-week bank strike and lockout that ended Oct. 19. The goodies are those who didn't cash more than they had on deposit.

Judgment day is today when the shut-down banks plan to reopen.

For four weeks, behind locked doors, clerks have been stamping "good" or "bad" trying to cope with a flood of paper that reached them in letters and night depositories.

No one knows yet how much the bad guys got away with. Estimates run from £1 million to £3 million. That is a range up to $7.5 million. Experts say professional writers of rubber cheques were at work during the bank stoppage.

Police are investigating cattle purchases at fairs and markets in the last six months. Unofficial reports indicate cheques totalling almost £1 million were involved.

While banks remained closed, supermarkets and saloons were the principal cheque cashers. Customers who ran out of cheques used scrap paper to draw on banks.

Sexy Perfume Drives Males Wild

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say a new sexy perfume drives male gypsy moths so wild that the pests lose interest in females.

Scientists hope the scent, called disparlure, can be used to trap the destructive forest pests or so confuse them that they forget to mate.

The power of the sex attractant was demonstrated at a news conference Monday by Dr. Morton Beroza, an entomologist.

He fastened a male gypsy moth at each end of a small metal whirligig enclosed in a glass cage. The moths were calm. Then Beroza gave them a whiff of disparlure. They suddenly became frantic, flapped their wings and whirled the metal bar around and around.

Asked what the moths were chasing, Beroza explained:

After a few minutes, looking droopy and worn-out, the moths closed their wings and perched quietly.

The moths were imported in 1869 by a Massachusetts experimenter. Several escaped and since have been riddling trees and shrubs in the northeastern United States.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

NANCY, 6 p.m., Channel 2. This is one show that won't make the full season, and tonight's episode may be one of the reasons. The producing network has already announced Nancy is due for the mid-year axe. Tonight the newlyweds and their resident secret service guards are moving to a bigger house.

★ ★ ★

EDDIE'S FATHER, 7 p.m., Channel 8. Character actor Will Geer makes a special appearance in the role of Eddie's grandfather. He has an idea they can't make him shake . . . he wants to take Eddie on an expedition down the Amazon. Mrs. Livingston and Eddie's father are aghast at the prospect, and put their feet down.

★ ★ ★

THE MOD SQUAD, 7:30 p.m., Channels 4 and 8. One of the continuing themes of this series has been young veterans returning from Vietnam and getting into some manner of trouble. Tonight's story is quite the opposite. This GI doesn't return and Linc, an old friend, tries to find out why. He's told by some alleged buddies that the young man was killed in action. But that explanation doesn't ring true.

★ ★ ★

THE DON KNOTTS SHOW, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Barney Fife" welcomes his old boss, Andy Griffith, and the air is filled with nostalgia. The two get together on the "front porch" for one of their old conversations on everything from radio to the new "square dance" steps. Also on hand are Jo Ann Pflug and the singing group, the Celebration. Don does some impressions from Jo Ann's hit movie, M.A.S.H., and she solos "Goin' Out of My Head" and "Lost that Lovin' Feelin'."

★ ★ ★

HEE HAW, 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. From "Hee Haw" to "Hamlet" is the best means of describing this TV night. Charley Pride and Susan Raye are the guests on this down-country "Laugh-In," with Pride soloing "Louisiana Man" and Miss Ray in "Glory Hallelujah, How They Sing" with the Hagers. Co-host Buck Owens sings "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands" and Roy Clark solos "Laura's Theme."

THE HALLMARK HALL OF FAME, 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Hamlet" starring Richard Chamberlain. This has to be the highlight of the TV season thus far. Richard Chamberlain hasn't been on American television since his "Dr. Kildare" series departed in 1966. When word circulated that he was going to England to play "Hamlet" there was much scoffing here and some hearty laughs abroad. But he proved to be far more than a television actor. He scored a success and he received high praise and almost unanimous acclaim from the formidible British drama critics. Tonight you will see and hear the reason for that acclaim, with Hallmark surrounding him with a classic cast including Sir John Gielgud (the ghost of Hamlet's father), Sir Michael Redgrave (Polonius), Margaret Leighton (Hamlet's mother) and Richard Johnson (Claudius). Ciaran Madden makes her American TV debut as Ophelia.

★ ★ ★

STOREFRONT LAWYERS, 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Teen-ager Jerry Patman is arrested for assaulting the lawyer who handled the insurance settlement after the death of his father. The boy feels it was mishandled and when the storefront lawyers move in on the case they find out there was more than anger behind the youth's erratic behavior.

★ ★ ★

JOHNNY CASH, 9 p.m., Channel 8, Lorn Greene, Pa Cartwright of Bonanza fame, is slated as headlining guest. Regulars including Johnn's wife June Carter, Carl Perkins and the Statler Brothers also appear.

★ ★ ★

MARCUS WELBY M.D. 10 p.m., Channel 4. "The Girl from Rainbow Beach". Dr. Welby gives one of the most stunning diagnoses he'se ever given when he examines a young couple about to be married. The girl spent much of her early life in the Philippines, and Welby is forced to conclude that during that time she contracted leprosy. Tiffany Bolling and Don Galloway are featured.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I was glad to see in the Medical World News recently a most interesting and hopeful article on a technique which will enable a doctor to say to a heavy smoker long before a cancer appears, "Oddly shaped cells resembling those of lung cancer have been appearing in your sputum; if you go on smoking you can sign your death warrant. If you quit smoking now, in a few months you may well be saved."

Many readers have heard of the "Pap test" in which, by examining cells taken from the neck of a woman's womb, cancer can be either ruled out or recognized as present very early in the stage of development. If this condition is immediately attended to and the piece of womb is removed quickly, her life will probably be saved; if the condition is ignored and left a few years, the woman may die of cancer.

As a result of the widespread use of this test, it is done routinely by many fine gynecologists whenever a woman is examined. The mortality rate for cancer of the womb in the last 20 years has dropped spectacularly.

But what is sad is that in the last 20 years, the United States census curve for mortality due to cancer of the lung in men has shot up spectacularly, and it is the only such curve for an organ that has thus shot up. It looks now as if the microscopic examination of stained cells in human sputum can save thousands of lives that otherwise would be lost from lung cancer.

What has happened is that around 1960, Dr. Geno Saccomanno, pathologist at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colorado, has found that he can recognize in sputum the same slow increase in the number on cancer-like cells as he can recognize in the mucus that comes out of a woman's womb. Sputum cells, at first normal, in the case of a heavy smoker can keep growing each year more cancerous in appearance.

The doctor says that if he studies the sputum of 100,000 heavy smokers aged about 40, he will find 247 who look as if they are getting lung cancer. To show how long it takes for cancer to grow in the lung—in 1962, the doctor saw cancer-like cells in a smoking woman's sputum. It was 1969 before X-rays showed a tumor forming in her lung. It was removed and he now is hopeful that she will stay well.

What a wonderful thing the doctor has done for humanity; what a tremendous present he has given to heavy smokers to save them from death.

BENNETT TO OPEN ART WING

'Insurance Firm Hired Contractor'

Deputy labor minister William Sands said today the government is not responsible for the fact that a reportedly non-union contractor is making repairs to the Labor Department building on Superior.

Pickets appeared in front of the building Monday afternoon and again early today following the report that the repair job had been given to a non-union contractor.

The building was damaged recently when a motorist drove his car into it. The contractor, listed as L. Levert, was hired by the motorist's insurance company.

"It's strictly between the insurance company and the contractor," Sands said.

He said the accident took place during his holidays, and added it was lucky no staff member was injured. He said those who picketed the building should be glad of that, because the procees of granting certification to local unions around the province has not been hindered.

Schibli said the two workmen did not show up at the site today while pickets were there from 7:30-9 a.m.

Septic Tank Dump 'Leak' Now Plugged

The health board will continue efforts to have septic tank refuse dumped at sea, despite a patch job on the Millstream Road dump to prevent human wastes draining into the Thetis Lake system.

Rubymay Parrott, chairman of the Greater Metropolitan Board of Health, said Monday the Millstream dump, where septic tank cleaning firms now unload their cargos, has been patched up so the wastes will not leak into lakes at lower levels.

The septic tank trucks are using the dump because the firms have been refused permission to use the municipal sewer system. Civic authorities fear rocks and other debris removed from tanks would clog sewer pipelines.

Mrs. Parrott said the health board has been trying to arrange a meeting with the regional board, which is building the Macaulay Point sewer outfall. She said the septic tank issue probably would be discussed at the next meeting of the regional board.

Massive Head Injuries Caused Man's Death

James Maude, 23, of 2586 Second Street, Sidney, died of massive head injuries suffered in a three-car collision Nov. 8, a coroner's jury was told Monday night.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther, attached to St. Joseph's Hospital, said death was caused by skull fractures and extensive bruising, tearing and swelling of teh brain.

Maude died at St. Joseph's 12 hours after being admitted.

The inquest was adjourned by Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Richard Collett, 25, of 5174 Patricia Bay, and Susan Costain, 18, of 6961 Central Saanich, both injured in the accident, are now listed as being in fair condition at St. Joseph's.

Buddhists Told Not to Preach Without Permit

A Buddhist religious group, operating on a downtown street Saturday, was told it can't preach sermons without a permit.

Police took no action against the group, which was apparently talking to passers-by on the sidewalk, until they received a complaint from Eaton's that "hippies" were causing a disturbance.

The group was identified as the Rada Krishna Temple.

SURROUNDED by paraphernalia of the plains Indians, Cathy Rhodes finds no difficulty in projecting herself into the role of an Indian maiden. She plays that part in the University of Victoria student production of Arthur Kopit's Indians, a satirical farce at the Phoenix Theatre nightly this week. Victoria Fair actor John Krich directs. Set is by Robert Cothran.

Blinding Knife Attack Described by Student

He told court Trach attacked him unexpectedly Sept. 29 after an argument arose during an evening drinking bout in the older man's Langford home at 439 Atkins.

●

Earlier in the trial an RCMP constable appearing as a witness for prosecutor William Anderson had produced a heavy bush knife or machete which he said he found at 439 Atkins.

The constable said there appeared to be blood stains on the weapon's 18-inch steel blade.

Whitlock said he and his wife had been invited to the Trach house about 4 p.m. where he and the accused began drinking beer and discussing Russian history.

During the evening, while his wife went out to look after their two small children and run some errands, Whitlock said, he and Trach continued to talk and drink.

He said he noticed that both Mr. and Mrs. Trach "were getting extremely drunk."

The dispute arose, said Whitlock, when he decided to take one of the tranquilizing pills prescribed by his doctor for nervous anxiety.

"From behind me, like some aging pixie, his wife grabbed the pills from over my shoulder and disappeared into the bedroom."

He said he became concerned that Mrs. Trach "thought they were some illicit hallucinatory drug that was going to send her to cloud nine," and told her husband he should get them back.

●

Whitlock said he had no intention of going after the woman into her bedroom and became angry when her husband would do nothing.

"I insulted him. I told him off. I told him he was stupid," he said, and finally held him by the shoulders.

When Trach finally sat down again in a chair, Whitlock said he decided to leave and turned to go to the door. He hesitated, however, because his wife was due to return for him at any minute, he said.

"I went into the centre of the room and I was standing there . . . The next thing I remember I had been hit, here, across the eye.

"He was wielding this knife in a rather hopeless fashion."

"He was yelling, 'I'm a Cossack, I will kill you. I'm a Cossack, I will kill you. Get out of my house!"

●

Whitlock said he was sober at the time of the incident but he couldn't describe the knife which cut him.

"If I hadn't been sober — if I had gone down I would have been killed."

After grappling briefly with Trach he fled through the door and "got into the bush" which lay around the house in a deep "pitch-black" hallow.

He said he was terrified that his wife was going to arrive at the Trach house and be attacked, but he could not find his way in the woods.

Whitlock said he finally found his way to his home at 420-A Atkins by watching the infrequent car headlights on the road.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer Edward Pollard, Whitlock said Trach "showed signs of complete inebriation — complete drunkenness."

Pollard also asked Whitlock if he had not struck Trach in the face, in the chest, and kicked him twice in the groin.

"I deny striking him in any way," he replied.

Just before Ostler adjourned the trial to Wednesday afternoon Whitlock picked up the machete, exhibit one for the prosecution, and said:

"If that's the weapon that was used — I mean, a couple of more whacks and I'd have been gone.

Earlier in the trial Whitlock's wife Joanne testified that she had returned to the Trach's after leaving the two men earlier "still talking avidly about Russian history and various political figures."

When she came back at about 9 p.m., Mrs. Whitlock said, she came into the house to find Trach standing against the wall opposite the door.

"At the time he had . . . blood all over his arms. He kept swinging his arm as though he was holding a knife."

She said the first thing Trach said when she entered the room was:

"I lopped off your husband's ear with a sabre. I think I even lopped off both of them."

"I can just see the arm — the hair and all was just matted with blood," she said.

She rushed home to phone the RCMP, she said, because she thought her husband might be dead.

"I didn't see him until about 10:15. He was all covered with blood. It was soaking right into his underwear."

During Pollard's cross-examination she said she saw no marks or bruises on Trach's face when she returned.

Constable Barry Hovis, formerly stationed with the RCMP at Colwood, said he attended at 439 Atkins at approximately 9 p.m. where he found Trach seated at the kitchen table and "an amount of blood on the kitchen floor" leading out to the front door and the front porch.

Hovis said there was also blood on Trach, and that he later found the machete in Trach's bedroom with what appeared to be dried blood on the blade.

●

The constable said Trach "appeared to be quite intoxicated" when he first arrived.

The constable said that Oct. 4 when he returned to the Trach house looking for the vial of pills that started the dispute the accused began "speaking with reference to defending his home."

Trach told him Whitlock struck him in the abdomen. He told Hovis he had been passing blood and said:

"I had a right to defend myself. I don't know where the knife came from, someone just handed it to me and I defended myself."

Dr. V. G. Griswick, an eye specialist who treated Whitlock, said the damage to the eye was serious — a perforating injury 14 millimeters in length that "sliced up through the . . . iris, lens and cornea."

He said the lens of the eye was destroyed.

Esquimalt Wants 'Welfare Rules'

Esquimalt council wants the B.C. government to explain "the ground rules of welfare."

The request came Monday after aldermen questioned a bill of over $20,000 for welfare last month.

Debate was sparked by a routine motion instructing the municipal treasurer to pay last month's bill and ended with the decision to write the government for more detailed information on welfare.

One alderman questioned more than 30 items on the expenditure list related to welfare and totalling more than $20,000.

Ald. Bill Bell said a letter should be sent to Rehabilitation Minister Gaglardi telling him that Esquimalt council was "aware of all the phoney baloney that goes on in welfare."

He said a municipality the size of Esquimalt could not afford to pay $20,000 for welfare in one month.

"Let's tell him (Gaglardi) to send back some of these yahoos who come here from other parts of Canada and from the States to live off our welfare dollars."

Mayor Arthur Young read a letter to council from Gaglardi stating that council has the authority to question payment of welfare to any person.

Young said today he thought none of the council knew enough of welfare procedure and the intent of the letter to the minister was for more information.

He said the council's attitude was to "get a little tougher" with welfare recipients.

FIREMEN INJURED IN SAANICH BLAZE

Two Saanich firemen received minor injuries Monday as they battled a major house fire at 399 Braefoot Road.

Jack Northrup and Lieut. Harold Armitage were released after hospital treatment for minor cuts.

The fire, which ripped through the two-storey, split-level home, extensively damaged every room in the building.

Owner of the house is Victor Wilk.

The fire apparently started in a basement room and was swept through the structure by a strong wind.

No damage estimate was available and no cause was given.

Walkathon Raises Over $2,000

Participants in a 10-mile walkathon Sunday raised $2,184.55 to go toward completion of the Sidney Scout-Cub Hall.

Of 143 starters, 109 completed the hike. Highest pledge sheet of the day was turned in by Gail Garland who raised $110. David Allard was second with $108.

Bobby Bryant, 12, of 10081 Fifth St., completed the 10-mile route in one hour and 10 minutes. He was followed by Paul Welle and David Langtry.

First cub-scout to finish was Chris Flint, and the first girl guide was Pat Evans.

The walkathon took place in driving wind and rain. One mother found her little girl walking in shoes that had fallen apart along the way. A switch was quickly made, and the mother returned home shoeless and sockless.

Vandalism At Church Unsolved

Three altars were found desecrated Saturday morning. Banners, vessels and flowers had been thrown down.

Police Court

A 53-year-old man who knocked down a woman pedestrian after running a red light on Friday the 13th and then fled the scene was fined a total of $1,100 Monday.

Frederick Dennis, of 1157 Johnson, pleaded guilty to impaired driving failing to remain at the scene of an accident Friday, and also failing to remain at the scene of an accident after his car collided with a taxi Oct. 26.

Judge William Ostler fined him $200 and $400 for the offences of Friday and $500 for the Oct. 26 offence.

"You were impaired, you drove against a red light and you struck a pedestrian. It was only the sheerest of good luck that you didn't kill that woman," Ostler said.

He ordered Dennis to pay the fine at $100 per month.

★ ★ ★

Two men who pleaded guilty to joint charges of stealing a car and possessing tools for the purpose of breaking and entering were remanded to Nov. 23 for sentence.

Robert Parker, 23, of 728 Cloverdale, and David MacInnis, 24, of no fixed address, told arresting officers they intended to use the tools for a burglary to provide money for a heroin habit.

Parker asked Ostler if he could see a doctor because he was sick.

"I've got hepatitis and I'm a heroin addict," he said.

The Crown submitted a record for Parker dating back to 1965 and including such offences as assault causing bodily harm, robbery, uttering forged documents, armed robbery, and theft over $50.

Ostler ordered a presentence report for MacInnis, who had no previous record.

The judge also ordered a presentence report for 18-year-old Michael Cross of 841 Ellery.

The vocational school student pleaded guilty to dangerous driving, wilful damage under $50, being a minor in possession of liquor, common assault and driving without an inspection sticker on his car.

Court was told the charges arose out of a dispute Cross had with his girl friend.

After refusing to leave his girl friend's apartment at 122 Menzies following a party there, Cross struck her in the face, twisted her arm, and after going out of the apartment turned and threw a beer bottle through a window.

When police arrived at the scene, Ostler was told, Cross sped away in his car, ignoring the siren and flashing red light of the pursuing vehicle.

He shot one roadblock but was stopped by another at Belleville and Government and allowed his car to roll into a police vehicle.

There were a dozen bottles of beer in the trunk and one bottle on the front seat with the driver, court was told.

Cross told Ostler he was attending vocational school with financial assistance from Canada Manpower and social welfare.

"Whose car was it?" Ostler asked.

"My own," replied Cross.

"Whose liquor was it?"

"My own."

"Was it your understanding that Manpower and Welfare were to pay for those items?" the judge asked.

He remanded the case to Nov. 25.

Robbin Brigance, 27, of Sooke, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, was fined $300 and permitted to pay $50 a month.

He told court he was a self-employed farmer.

WANTS A BIG FAMILY

All but one of 12 Central American students, aged 11 to 18, have been placed with city families for a 2½-month stay starting Dec. 4. The students, from Costa Rica, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Panama, will attend public school here during their stay.

Not placed yet by the International Students Exchange Program is Fernando Pages, 15, of San Jose, Costa Rica.

Mr. and Mrs. Casey O'Gorman, 2904 Phyllis, have placed the other 11 children. The trouble with Fernando is that he would like to stay with a large family because he has only one brother.

"We've had one offer, but the family only has one boy, and that would be just another brother for Fernando," Mrs. O'Gorman said today.

"It's a difficult problem, because not many parents with large families are interested in another teen-ager coming into the house."

TWO YEARS WITH NEW HEART

Transplant Recipients Happy

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Perrin Johnston Jr. turned slowly and gazed across an after-dinner cribbage board into the eyes of Rev. Edward Madigan, a Roman Catholic priest.

"It's a miracle, Father," said Mr. Johnston, who received a heart transplant two years ago today at Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital. "Don't you stop once in-a while and feel that?

"Every day is beautiful, even if it's raining."

Father Madigan, who received his heart transplant in April, broke into a broad smile and replied in a lilting Irish brogue:

"I do, I do. This morning I stood on the corner and froze waiting for the bus—and I didn't mind a bit."

That's how two recipients in Canadian heart transplant operations spent the eve of Mr. Johnston's second anniversary of his transplant Monday night—enjoying a home-cooked meal, playing crib and swapping stories.

"And that's the way we want it, really," Mrs. Johnston said in an interview. "We just want to live like normal people."

PUBLICITY MIGHT HELP

All three agreed there was only one reason for submitting once more to photographs and interviews—the hope that it might help St. Michael's Hospital and its heart patients in the search for suitable donors.

"The donor aspect is so important," said Mr. Johnston. "There are numerous people awaiting a transplant and the possibility depends on a suitable match.

"God willing, we don't want anything to happen to anyone, but every week there are people who get into accidents. If they could think of giving life they could do so much."

Mr. Johnston, 56, is the third longest-living survivor of a heart transplant operation in the world. The second is John Parkinson, 54, of Montreal, who received his new heart Nov. 3, 1968, at Montreal's Royal Victoria Hospital.

Louis B. Russell Jr., 45, of Indianapolis, the longest survivor, celebrated his second anniversary last Aug. 24. Only one per cent of heart transplant patients live more than 18 months.

A retired engineer, Mr. Johnston has gone back to work part time with an oil company. He and his wife of 33 years, Margaret, have taken up jogging. He suffered his first heart attack 14 years ago and several thereafter.

In October, 1968, Mr. Johnston was admitted to hospital with severe heart failure and Mrs. Johnston doubted he would leave it. The transplant was performed Nov. 17, 1968, by heart surgeons Dr. Clare B. Baker and Dr. James Yeo.

From the beginning he did well, with only one incident of rejection in the first two weeks, which was easily overcome. Since then, Mr. Johnston's condition has progressively improved.

Father Madigan, parish priest of St. Monica's Church in downtown Toronto, is again celebrating mass, counselling his parishioners and "doing about 70 to 80 per cent" of his normal workload.

He received his new heart April 27. In September he tried his hand at a round of golf,—"Just one game, then they caught me."

ONCE WERE NEIGHBORS

Father Madigan and the Johnstons were once neighbors and have known each other for many years.

"Father Madigan was a very faithful visitor when I used to be in hospital so much," said Mr. Johnston. "It's good to be able to repay a little of that now."

Both men still have to go regularly to St. Michael's for checks. Mr. Johnston now is down to one visit every two weeks, Father Madigan goes every five days. And both still take low doses of anti-rejection drugs.

There have been 16 heart transplants in Canada, 10 of them in Montreal and the rest here.

'Truth Distorted'

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of the Canadian Trucking Association said during the weekend the Canadian Automobile Association and the Ontario Motor League have deliberately distorted the truth about the operation of triple-trailer-truck combinations. Mel W. Donnelly said a campaign against the use of such triple units in Ontario was launched even before a test of similar equipment in Alberta was completed.

Jordan M. Carlucci, a tenant in Chicago's 100-storey John Hancock building, has sued the building for $50,000 because he can't "live in the style in which he was accustomed" — his television won't work.

Carlucci's $520-a-month apartment is on the 63rd floor and because of an "engineering quirk" his $1,500 color television set only gets Channel 11, whose transmitter is 900 feet from one of his apartment windows, his circuit court suit said Monday.

The state rested its case Monday at the start of the 23rd week of the Sharon Tate murder trial, in Los Angeles and Charles Manson arose and demanded to be allowed to represent himself for the rest of the trial.

"I feel I can present a better case than the whole bunch of them," he said, pointing at the four defence lawyers.

The judge refused Manson's demand.

Paul Cliche, president of the Front de-Action Politique FRAP municipal party, said Monday in Montreal he has been asked to hand in his resignation by the party's ruling council.

Cliche said the decision to ask for his resignation was made by the council at a meeting Sunday at which he was not present.

He said Monday he had not yet made a decision on whether or not to resign as head of the organization, made up of citizens and labor groups, which was soundly defeated in municipal elections in Montreal last Oct. 25 won by Mayor Jean Drapeau's Civic Party.

Richard Cardinal Cushing, who died Nov. 2, often said he had no personal fortune and that he would die without one.

His will was filed Monday at the office of the Suffolk County, Boston, register of probate, Louis F. Musco.

The will said that whatever property of the Boston archdiocese was held in his name goes automaticaloy to his successor.

London factory manager John Allcock has complained to British Railways that its express delivery trains are going too fast.

He says they don't stop long enough for his firm's parcels to be unloaded in Northern England — and the goods wind up in Scotland.

The trial of Wilfred P. Gregory, former president of British Mortgage and Trust Co. of Stratford, Ont., on a charge of accepting a $10,000 bribe will open in Ontario Supreme Court Nov. 30, Crown prosecutor W. H. Longdon said Monday in Toronto.

The charge arisos from the near collapse of British Mortgage in 1965, when Atlantic Acceptance Corp. went bankrupt with a loss of between $70 million and $75 million. British Mortgage had more than $12 million invested in Atlantic at the time and Gregory was forced to resign as president.

TRAFFIC DEATH INQUEST OPENS

DUNCAN — An inquest into the death of pedestrian Dew Tay Chow, 77, of Duncan opened Monday evening.

Duncan RCMP said Chow was pronounced dead at the Cowichan and District Hospital Sunday night after he was struck by a car driven by Ronald Victor Marsonette of Polkey Road, Koksilah, at Government and Jubilee Streets, Duncan.

Isolated Girl, 13, Has Mind of Infant

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies have arrested the parents of a 13-year-old girl who doctors say can't talk and has the mind of an infant because she was kept in virtual isolation since birth.

Susan Wiley, wide-eyed and brown-haired, spent her time inside her parents' modest two-bedroom home in this Los Angeles suburb except for brief periods when she played in the yard or sat on the porch, deputies said.

They placed her mental development as equal to that of a 12- to 18-months-old infant, said she still wore diapers, and that her size was that of a 10-year-old.

The doctors said Susan could become physically normal after treatment but that they were unsure about possible mental progress.

Deputies said Susan has been in hospital since Nov. 4. The case was made public after her parents were arrested Monday.

Clark Wiley, 70, and his estranged wife Irene, 50, were booked for investigation of child abuse and released on $1,250 bail each.

Sheriff's investigators said a social worker brought the case to their attention when Mrs. Wiley left her husband, took Susan to live with the girl's grandmother in nearby Monterey Park and applied for welfare.

More Corruption Charged by Jury

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The long-time leader of the Hudson County Democratic political machine and the mayor of Jersey City have been indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of shaking down three construction firms engaged in public works.

Named with John Kenny, 77, the county political boss, and Mayor Thomas Whelan, 48, were 10 other persons, including Hudson County Police Chief Fred Kropke, 57, and Thomas Flaherty, 42, president of the city council of Jersey City.

In an indictment made public Monday, all were accused of extortion-conspiracy in the alleged milking of $181,682 from three construction firms.

Kenny, Whelan, Flaherty and Bernard Murphy, 52, the Jersey City purchasing agent, also were indicted on charges of filing false income-tax returns.

A year ago the same grand jury indicted Mayor Hugh Addonzio of Newark, the state's largest city, and 14 other Newark officials and underworld figures on extortion-conspiracy charges arising from similar construction firm shakedowns.

Addonizio and four co-defendants were convicted last July and are appealing prison sentences.

Bertrand Backs War Act Use

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Jacques Bertrand, former Quebec premier and leader of the Union Nationale, said Sunday he would have applied the same strategy as Premier Robert Bourassa in the kidnap crisis begun last month and that explanations provided by the premier on the matter appeared sufficient.

Mr. Bertrand said on the French-language television station CFTM that the government "did what it had to do in the circumstances."

The former premier added that Mr. Bourassa made him aware of certain facts in the kidnappings of former Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, subsequently murdered by his captors, and British diplomat James Cross, "and these seemed to me that the government's stand was correct."

Drug Reduces DDT Levels

MIAMI (AP) — A team of Miami medical researchers reports a commonly used anti-convulsant drug significantly reduces the residue of DDT and other organic pesticides in the human body.

In a test in which 14 prison volunteers received daily doses of the drug phenytoin for nine months, residues of DDT, DDE and dieldrin in the body fat dropped an average 75, 61 and 73 per cent, respectively.

Totems Take Fivepin 'Spiel

Totems downed TVBs, a Youth Bowling Council squad, 2998-2896 in the final despite an outstanding game of 401 rolled by TVB lead Robert Flindell.

The Hunters and Three Hits and a Miss finished in a 2797-2797 tie in the "B" final after a check by the tournament committee uncovered a 10-point scoring error in the second game. Hunters won the one-game tiebreaker 1037-942.

"Skip" Sandra Wood led Totem Travel to victory with an 886 in the final including a 342 single in the third game to help overcome Flindell's large game.

Mrs. Wood, who scored a 635 in the semi-final against Thompson Bros. Roofing, averaged 263 for 15 games 21 points over her average last season.

John Broste tossed the high series in a tournament which attracted 38 rinks by bowling a 952. Borste and C. Hepner tied for high single honors with 2,385. Betty Mancell of Honeymoon Bay had the high women's series of 907 and the high single of 375.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Full Crew a Must

By PAT DUFOUR

One of the lessons that was hammered home this weekend when gale-force winds struck at the end of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's race of Sidney on Sunday is the foolhardiness of sailing a boat undercrewed.

One of the casualties was D. R. White's Cal 25 Despatch, who ended up on the rocks at Roberts Point after she made an accidental jibe and her boom caught in the backstay.

White was sailing singlehanded and was in no position to take the fast evasive action that such weather conditions demand.

Luckily he was able to scramble ashore and his boat was saved. But there could have been a different ending in another and less frequented locale.

★ ★ ★

The Turkey Head Sailing Association deserves a bow for trying to avoid such a situation by writing minimum crew requirements into its racing regulations.

It stipulates that boats between 13 and 20 feet must have a minimum crew of two, those from 20 to 26 feet must have at least three crewing, while yachts from 26 to 50 feet must have at least four crew members on board.

Fortunately, Sunday's race at Sidney resulted in no loss of life or boats but it was an impressive warning that safety rules are designed for seamen — not, by any means sissies.

The big winner was Bud Peetz's Saki. She was followed by Ben Jespersen's Limfjord, Gordie Inglis' Saltshaker, Arthur Moorehouse's Diana, John Benson's Venje, Ole Backhaus' Shalom, Merv Britten's Bird of Dawning, Will Jensen's Yogi, Dave Taylor's Achates and Bert Buchanan's Lirig Grbu.

Because of the gale-force sou'easterlies that whipped up during the first four mile race Sunday, THSA officials cancelled the second race of the day.

There were 43 boats in the morning race, sailed in waters off Oak Bay. Every wind condition in the book was thrown at the competitors, ranging from soft flukey norwesterlies that blew about five knots at the beginning to lusty 30-knot sou'easterlies before the finish line was reached.

As the sou'easterlies filled in from behind the bigger boats were able to come into their own, moving up through the fleet.

Winners of the various classes were: Thunderbirds, Ligero; Haidas, Greg Oliver's T'Weather; Cal 25s, Puff; Sharks, J. P. Le Dallic's La Marquise; Calgan 23s, Dave Hartwick's Spray; Cal 20s, Vern Stilborn's Calindigo; Cruising A, Shoal, and Cruising B, Gerry Howell-Jones' Hellwr.

After two of their number were dunked in waters outside Cadboro Bay Saturday, planing dinghy skippers of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club decided to call it a day.

Fireball skippers completed two races, three of them righting their boats and carrying on after having joining the 'flippers club.'

Pakistan Storm Survivors Now Face Cholera Threat

Soviet Robot Exploring Lunar Surface

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet scientists soft-landed a robot spaceship on the moon today and then sent an eight-wheel vehicle trundling over the lunar surface in a series of earth-controlled experiments.

Lunokhod I—the first vehicle on the moon—rolled down a special gangway from its mothership early today two hours 41 minutes after Luna 17 slid down to a soft landing in the moon's Sea of Rains at 6:47 a.m. (10:47 p.m. EST Monday), the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Lunokhod—the name means moon vehicle—is carrying scientific apparatus, control gear, radio communications systems and television observation equipment to perform experiments monitored back on earth, Tass said.

"For the first time in the history of astronautics an automatic moon vehicle, controlled from earth, was taken to the moon and began scientific investigations," Tass said.

Moon Truck Crawls 65 Feet

The moon truck crawled 65 feet away from its landing point in initial experiments, Tass added. The Lunokhod is controlled from a special communications centre in the Soviet Union, and scientists are using television cameras aboard the revolutionary vehicle for information on its position and the nature of the surrounding lunarscape.

Soviet science has entered an age of "effective new means of moon exploration with the help of automatic machines," Tass said as it gave word of the Russian space spectacular.

Tass also reported that both Lunokhod and the Luna spaceship carried Soviet flags and pennants and bas-reliefs of Lenin.

All systems aboard Lunokhod were functioning normally, Tass added. The Russians had given no previous indication that anything as dramatic as the Lunokhod experiment had been planned for the Luna 17 moon mission.

Soviets Favor Automation

Observers said the achievement underlines the Russian enthusiasm for space exploration by automated means and reflects the technical lengths to which they are carrying their unmanned space probe program.

Tass also revealed that the moon vehicle is carrying a piece of foreign equipment—a French-built reflector for laser location experiments.

France and the Soviet Union have been co-operating in space techniques for some time but this is believed the first time a Russian ship has carried non-Soviet equipment.

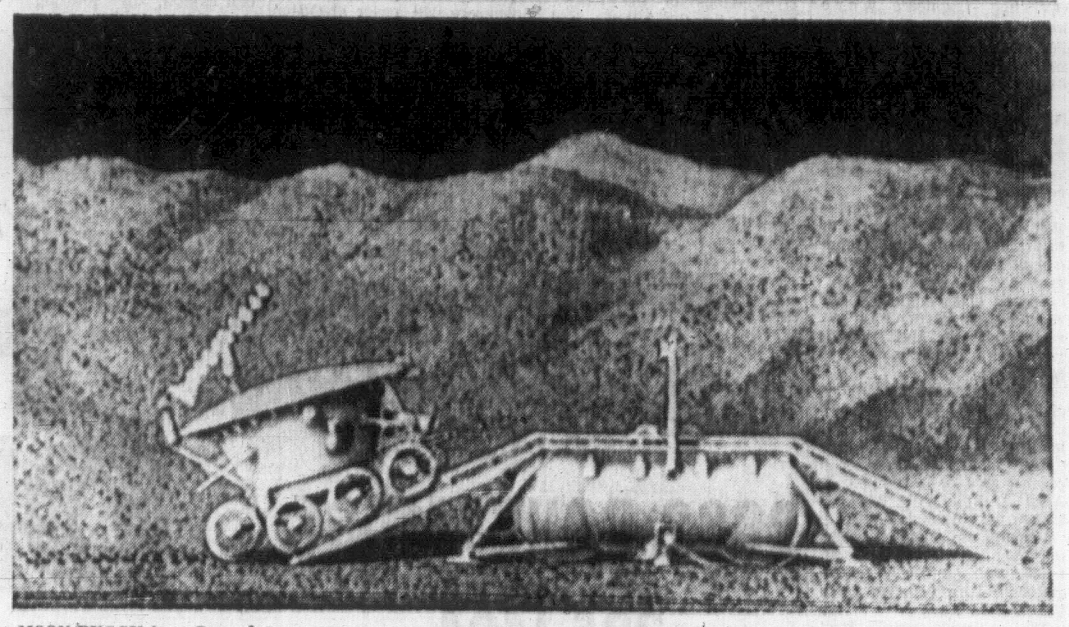

Director Heinz Kaminski of the observatory at Bochum, West Germany, who reported the Luna landing earlier, said that Luna 17 is a vastly improved version of Luna 16, which brought back the Soviet Union's first lunar sample in September.

Luna 17 was launched Nov. 11 and went into orbit around the moon Sunday, following closely the pattern set by its predecessor, Luna 16.

Luna 16 scored two moon firsts for the Soviet Union, both by scooping out lunar soil automatically and launching a capsule containing the precious moondust on its way back to earth.

A sample of the dust went on public display for the first time Monday at Moscow's exhibition of economic achievements. It looks like grey gunpowder in its glass case, but viewed through a magnifying glass propped beside it, it looks more like clay.

MOON BUGGY from Russia made a successful soft landing on the moon, announced Tass, the Soviet news agency. An artist with the agency depicts the self-propelled lunar module as eight-wheeled and says it has conducted experiments 65 feet from the mother ship. The buggy is controlled from Russia.

Dead Estimates Up to 500,000

DACCA (CP) — Cholera spread today among hungry, homeless survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that devastated heavily populated islands at the mouth of the Ganges River and stretches of the East Pakistani coast behind them.

Estimates of the total casualties were still only guesses, although some relief officials said Monday night that the count of the dead had reached 55,000. Information Secretary Syed Ahmed spoke of possibly "300,000 or 500,000" dead, adding that such numbers were not confirmed.

Cholera, a disease endemic to the area, was reported spreading on Hatia, one of the stricken islands in the Ganges Delta cyclone alley. Three ships sent there with medical supplies were waiting for swift currents to subside so they could land their cargo.

Officials feared a widespread epidemic due to polluted water and the destruction of sanitation facilities.

A health department spokesman said nearly one million doses of anti-cholera vaccine had been sent to the area with a large shipment of safe drinking water.

OUTLINES AREA

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman said the storm early Friday hit an area of 2,388 square miles in five districts with 2.2 million people. Casualty reports still were unobtainable from many areas because of ruined communication facilities, he said.

The commissioner himself put the official death toll at 32,771 with more that 2,000 known to be missing. But he admitted the survey was by no means complete.

'Bodies Rotting On Beach'

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

MANPURA, Bay of Bengal (AP) — Human bodies mingled with the carcasses of cattle today rotting together on a beach of this stricken island in the heart of the East Pakistan cyclone disaster area.

Survivors begged for water and food as the first visitors from the outside arrived here since a tidal wave washed at least 10,000 of the island's 26,000 population to their deaths.

Survivors in damp skirtlike wraparounds clutched the hands of visitors and in one instance bent to kiss their feet. They wanted food that was not spoiled and water not drawn from pools polluted with the bodies of men and animals.

Arab Approval Given Syria Coup

By The Associated Press

Egypt, Libya and Sudan endorsed today Gen. Hafez Assad's coup in Syria and said they are ready to admit Syria as a fourth partner in their projected federation.

Libya's head of state, Col. Muammar Kadafi, made the declaration on behalf of the three Arab countries after a 24-hour visit to Damascus, Syria's capital.

His statement was broadcast by the state-controlled Damascus radio.

Egypt and Syria were linked in the United Arab Republic in 1958 but it collapsed in three years.

In an earlier broadcast, Assad said the planned federation has "rekindled the hopes of the Arab masses in an early Arab unity."

Assad, Syria's defence minister and the leader of the ruling Baath Socialist party's military wing, Friday ousted President Noureddin Atassi and arrested Atassi and Maj.-Gen. Salah Jadid.

A coup by the army preceded Syria's withdrawal in September, 1961, from the United Arab Republic, the effort by the late President Nasser to unify the Arab nations. At its height, the alliance included only Syria, Egypt and Yemen, and Nasser broke it up after Syria withdrew.

Assad announced Monday he had formed a provisional Baath command to rule until a party congress selects a new permanent leadership. His government will form a coalition with other leftist political organizations in Syria, he said, and there were reports that pro-Egyptian parties, banned under Jadid, would be asked to join the coalition.

Canada Sells Wheat

WINNIPEG (CP) — A sale involving a maximum of 37 million bushels of Canadian wheat has been made to Algeria, the Canadian wheat board announced today.

Ottawa To Resist U.S. Demands

WASHINGTON (CP) —President Nixon has served notice his administration will renew its demand that the five-year U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement be revised to eliminate provisions favoring Canada.

But officials in Ottawa said Monday Canada will continue to resist the American demands.

In his annual report to Congress on the agreement, Nixon says the continuation of the portions of the 1965 pact favoring Canada "would be contrary to the premise on which the United States entered the agreement, namely that market forces would be allowed to determine the most economic pattern of investment production and trade."

At issue between the two countries is Annex A of the agreement, under which the Canadian auto industry received special transitional arrangements which Nixon noted would continue "until its smaller industry could adjust operations to the much larger North American market."

Under this proviso, Canada gives duty-free treatment to motor vehicles and original equipment only when imported by qualified manufacturers. These manufacturers

POLICE CHECK OUT HOUSES

FLQ Note Probed

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are investigating today the authenticity and contents of another note purported to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The note, received Monday by French-language radio station CKAC, was immediately turned over to police. A CKAC spokesman declined comment on the contents of the note and said it was not broadcast by the station.

A police spokesman said that the note, signed by the Louis Riel cell, was being examined by technical experts. He did not divulge the contents.

Meanwhile, director Maurice St. Pierre of the provincial police ordered officers from 16 suburban municipalities on the western part of Montreal Island to make house-to-house calls in their respective areas.

One police chief said the men were told to check out vacant houses and recently occupied houses.

BILL WOULD DULL 'WATCHDOG'S' TEETH

Times News Servic

OTAWA — Legislation was introduced into the Commons Monday which would limit activities of Canada's auditor-general.

The legislation enables the government to criticize the auditor-general, watchdog over federal spending, after he publishes his annual report on "fraud, default or mistake" in federal accounts.

The new bill was presented in the name of G. M. Drury, treasury board president.

★ ★ ★

After Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson issued his latest critical report last spring, Drury and several other ministers responded with what many took as criticism.

The legislation also authorizes the government to publish its own observations on the findings of the auditor-general's office at the same time as the annual audit.

Three months' notice would have to be given the government concerning the contents of the auditor-general's report.

POLICE CHARGE 30 IN DRUG NET

Local police and the RCMP launched a roundup of people charged with drug offences this morning.

Thirty people had been charged by noon and 16 of them were under arrest.

RCMP Staff Sgt. William Murdoch said the charges, mostly for trafficking, involved heroin as well as the so-called soft drugs, marijuana, hashish and LSD.

Murdoch said the drug raids were a co-ordinated effort, under way simultaneously on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

Locally, Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt police worked with the RCMP and began making arrests at 8 a.m.

A number of the people charged were expected to appear in Victoria provincial court later today.

Liberals Gain In Byelections

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The youth vote appeared to have little effect on the outcome of three federal byelections Monday as the Liberals improved their standing in the Commons by one seat.

Leopold Corriveau took the Quebec riding of Frontenac from the Creditistes for the Liberals while Maurice Dupras held Labelle for the Liberals and Jack Murta retained the Manitoba riding of Lisgar for the Progressive Conservatives.

The Liberals now have 154 Commons seats to 73 for the Conservatives, 23 for the NDP and 13 for the Creditistes. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux sits as independent member for Stormont-Dundas and brings the Commons total to 264 seats.

TOTAL VOTE FALLS

It was the first time 18 to 20-year-olds could vote federally and they boosted the number of eligible voters in each riding— 15 per cent to 38,608 in Frontenac, 14 per cent to 47,000 in Labelle and seven per cent to 34,000 in Lisgar.

Despite this the total vote in all three ridings fell from returns in the 1968 general election.

In Frontenac the total vote fell to 23,531 from 26,902, in Labelle to 20,961 from 29,867 and in Lisgar to 19,516 from 23,497.

It is the first time the House has been full since Ed Schreyer resigned his NDP seat to lead the party to power in Manitoba in June, 1969.

KGB PLOT?

By VICTOR ZORZA
(Special to the Times)

LONDON (NANA) — The mysterious appearance in the West of Nikita Khrushchev's "reminiscences" looks like a move in a deep-laid psychological warfare plot hatched in the Kremlin. The linking of the name of Victor Louis with the transmission of the Khrushchev material to Time-Life means that the Soviet government, whose servant Louis is, has had a hand in the affair.

There is a pattern in all this activity which suggests that the KGB's "Department D" (for disinformation) is building up step by step a network of contacts and arrangements which would enable it to command the use of the West's massive publicity media for some special purpose of its own.

Any similarity between all this and an international spy thriller is not purely coincidental. Victor Louis has often figured as the hero of such tales in situations which were not at all fictional.

Louis, a Soviet citizen residing in Moscow, also acts as a correspondent for Western newspapers. This enable him to undertake frequent foreign travels during which he has performed important if unorthodox duties for the Soviet foreign ministry in countries where Russia has no formal representation—as, for instance, in Spain and Formosa.

Earlier this month, he was in Kuwait, and has since then been reported in Fiji.

Louis and several men from Time-Life are reported in the Danish press to have stayed at the Hotel d'Angleterre in Copenhagen at the end of August, when the Khrushchev deal was apparently negotiated. His non-journalistic functions have often been mentioned in the world press.

The New York Times once said, in a biographical note, that Victor Louis was "a Soviet citizen believed to have close connection with the Soviet secret police." He had carried out in the past "special tasks" in the field of foreign propaganda—"apparently at the behest of the Soviet, KGB, or secret police, of the Soviet foreign office, or both."

As far back as August 1967, the "New York Times"

Anti-Dope Pushers

Now People Try to Make Money Turning Kids Off And It's Even Enough to Anger School Officials

By PETER McNELLY

It is well-organized and frequently profitable. Some people are cashing in on it, but in Victoria the students are getting fed up.

"Kids are saying, 'for heaven's sake, cool it.' We're up to here with this drug education. Don't push it for a while," says E. G. Callbeck, director of special education services for the Greater Victoria School District.

Callbeck is responsible for the kind of drug information program available in nearly 60 region schools. He says his approach is "as low-key as possible."

●

Interviewed in his office at the Institute of Adult Studies, Callbeck produced mounds of anti-drug literature from Canadian and United States governments and publishing houses.

After nearly half an hour's quick perusal, he said this was only one-third the material he possessed. Most of it, he said, is unsolicited.

Two of the most interesting publications offer good examples of the kind of propaganda students can be subjected to in the name of drug education.

The first is a brochure produced by Ontario's Council on Drug Abuse, a non-profit foundation with a board of directors from several major Canadian corporations.

CODA's brochure is a stark white-on-black production with a page two pitch for money. The pitch continues through the last pages when CODA reveals that it is trying to raise $1.5 million to prepare a six-phase anti-drug program.

Besides Slick Kits and Games Callbeck Doesn't Like Paying $100 to Reformed Drug Addicts

Phase one, pamphlets and speakers kits. Phase two, movies and TV advertisements. Phase three, seminars, discussion groups and in-class anti-drug studies prepared by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in the U.S.

Phases four, five and six are an international symposium of drug abuse — held in August 1970 at the Ontario Science Centre — youth programs for small towns and help for "approved projects" of other anti-drug agencies.

Arrangements existed for a trial at one junior secondary school this fall, but Callbeck said the deal collapsed when CODA dropped Lockheed's program under criticism that it had too much of a "Madison Avenue" approach.

Callbeck said Lockheed then asked whether the school board would pay $2,400 for the trial. This was refused.

Lockheed's program is called "drug decision, an instructional package for grades 7 through 9 . . . that creates in the student an understanding and an awareness of the real problems connected with drug abuse."

The "instructional package" works in five phases. First, students are taught "disaster management" techniques. They then study the effect of drugs on man. Phase three studies the legal aspect of drug abuse.

After phases one through three are completed, students put their knowledge to use by playing the "drug attack game." In the game, students assume the roles of policemen, mayors and health officials.

Lockheed's literature states: "In the assumed role, the student is confronted with a simulated drug attack, and he is called upon to apply the knowledge he has gained in phases I, II and III to stop the attack and treat its victims."

Skilful use of information from the first three phases determines the winner. This is a kind of programmed learning experience which dictates the correct and incorrect options to the student.

The last phase is called "rehabilitation." Students spend four days acting out the role of persons committed to drug treatment centres and those responsible for patient care.

Lockheed's literature says a key aspect of this phase is that students become members of a board responsible for determining when patients can be released from treatment.

"In reaching his own decision, the student recognizes that he must consider the welfare of the individual as well as the requirements of society," Lockheed says.

Callbeck said the market for drug education campaigns has become staurated. The result is that students are becoming highly resistant to this kind of pitch.

"My objection is to the idea that drugs can be made profitable to the person who lectures, produces pamphlets, writes books or develops programs condemning the use of drugs to the point that the market becomes saturated."

He said other examples are reformed drug addicts who charge $100 to get on a stage and talk about drugs.

The school district's low-key policy on drugs is individual counselling. The board had hired nine counsellors who visit area schools throughout the year.

Callbeck says most counselling is initiated by the student, but a counsellor can call on students if he feels it is necessary, say in the case of suspected trafficking at school.

He says each counsellor handles his situation as he sees fit, but guarantees confidentiality.

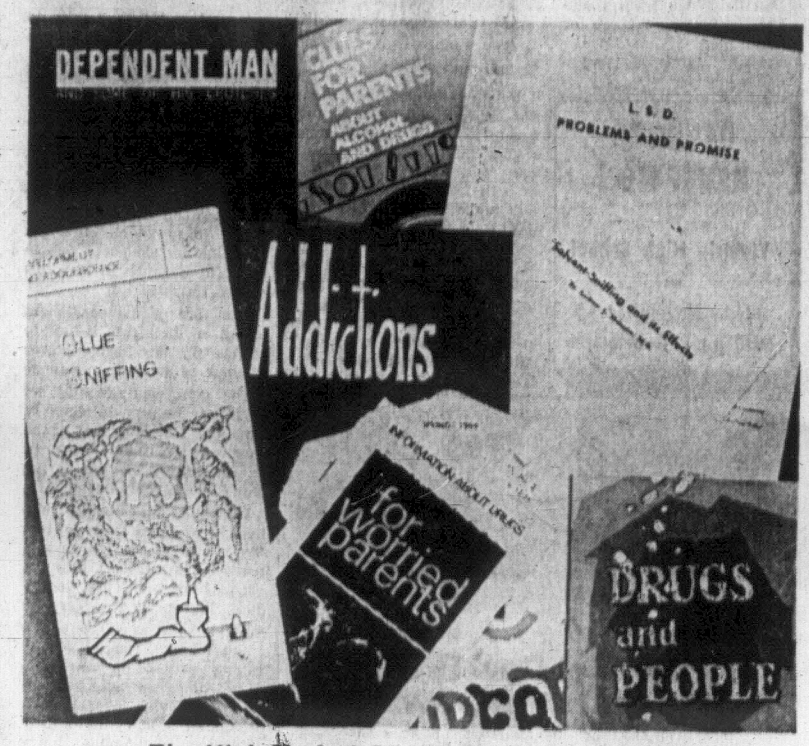

"I'm trying to adapt processes to the ways young people are acting and thinking. You just try crossing that generation gap. You can't wag your finger and expect to change them."

The board also has spent $240 preparing 600 drug information kits distributed to parents upon request. The kits limit themselves to four U.S. public health service booklets on narcotics, LSD, marijuana and amphetamines and barbituates.

The also contain a chart on symptoms of drug use and a booklet called Narcotic Drugs prepared by district counsellors and students.

Callbeck said the board permits the youth detail of the Victoria police to visit area schools. Cool-Aid's Charles Barber said his group also visits local junior and senior secondary schools on request.

"We keep ourselves as much out of sight as we can, because our total goal is to help the kid," Callbeck said.

The High-Pitched Blitz That Doesn't Work

Davis Denies Picking On City Over Water

Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis wasn't picking on Victoria when he ordered the Greater Victoria Water Board to provide water for Goldstream to enable the salmon to spawn.

The minister in a telephone interview from Ottawa said today his department plans to crack down on other communities.

"We are aware that other streams have problems and we intend to inform those responsible to do something to improve the situation," he said.

He was replying to a charge Saturday by Mayor Courtney Haddock that he (the minister) was engaging in a "childish political ploy".

The mayor said he was angry at the minister for sending him a letter insisting that water be provided for the spawning salmon when the board had already taken action to save the fish.

The minister's letter was sent from Ottawa on Nov. 4, the day water commissioner Ron Upward announced water would be released into Goldstream.

Davis said the letter was not intended to be made public.

"I had nothing to do with the release of the letter," he said. "It was meant to inform the mayor of the provisions of the Fisheries Act.

It was sent after senior fisheries officials had studied the Goldstream problem and had conferred with Upward.

Department officials believed water could be spared and that the board had forgotten in its long range water conservation plans to provide for the needs of the salmon.

"The trouble is in the past the act has not been enforced as it should have been," Davis said. "This has not been the fault of senior fisheries officials, but the lack of 'political will' to see that its provisions are carried out."

Under the act, he said, fish have priority over water.

It was passed years ago when there was not the demand for water as there is today, he explained. It gave the government wide powers.

B.C. Labor Official Resigns

The provincial labor department's registrar has resigned, deputy minister William Sands said today, but a reliable source said Ewan Rowntree was forced to quit.

Rowntree, who was contacted at home, said only that he is no longer with the department.

Rowntree's lawyer is working on the case.

Sands said Rowntree resigned Nov. 10, that he received notice of resignation, and the Civil Service Commission now is looking for a replacement.

"What his reasons may be I have no knowledge," Sands said.

Rowntree, who is a lawyer, had been registrar for about five years.

Manpower Head Speaks Thursday

Canada Manpower manager George Bevis will speak Thursday on Victoria's unemployment problems.

Bevis will also outline new federal programs aimed at helping workers find jobs.

Bevis' talk will be at 2 p.m. in the Midgley room of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

Business agents, union executives, apprenticeship committees, and others have been invited.

City Hall Heeds Plea For Traffic Reform

City hall today offered to take the first step in a new start on planning transportation and land use for the whole region.

Council's B Committee reacted to a report from the city's traffic department which was described as a "desperate plea for political leadership" in a problem the regional district has been unequipped to deal with.

The committee promised to ask the provincial government to combine its resources with Victoria's and decide how to proceed.

Traffic engineer David Campbell's report called for improved mass transit systems, and rejection of freeway plans in favor of an improved arterial street system.

Campbell said that the region has about eight years in which to find new solutions, before all current traffic space is used up.

At the suggestion of City Manager Dennis Young, the committee decided to revive a motion that has been lying on the council table to ask the province's co-operation.

Young said that the region is not equipped to handle such a study and that nothing will be done about the problem until someone decides to "pick it up and carry the ball."

Ald. Peter Pollen, describing the problem as the "most vital" in the area, commented: "We haven't got eight years — eight years is when the whole damned thing grinds to a stop."

The city's intention is not to do a whole study itself but to join the provincial government in deciding how the regional government should approach the whole problem, Young said.

The regional government at present is "spread too thin" to be able to tackle the problem itself, he said.

The ultimate effect will probably be to update an earlier transportation study done by the region in co-operation with the four core municipalities.

Campbell said that any real study would take four or five years to complete, but Victoria still has time before a high degree of congestion takes place.

"I think Victoria's at a point when we could become a model for North America," he said.

Such things as express buses and development of offices on the perifery of the downtown core would be approaches to the problem, he said.

Teachers 88% For Striking

Teachers throughout the province are 88 per cent in favor of strike action to get a better pension plan from the provincial government.

The results of the Oct. 30 vote released today by the B.C. Teachers Federation closely followed earlier indications of support when a province-wide straw vote was conducted.

Locally, the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association were 83 per cent in favor. The teachers had been 84.4 per cent in favor in the straw vote.

"We achieved what we wanted to achieve as far as solidarity," said Les Isaacson, president of the G.V.T.A.

Isaacson said negotiations are continuing.

He is attending an executive meeting of the B.C.T.F. in Vancouver over the weekend at which time the vote will probably be discussed.

Premier Bennett said Oct. 22 that pensions will be "greatly increased" next year for teachers, civil servants and municipal employees but did not disclose the amount.

Strike Vote Set For Bus Drivers

Bus drivers and mechanics at B.C. Hydro and Power Authority in the Victoria and Vancouver areas will hold a strike vote Thursday and Friday.

The move was announced today by John Harlow, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union local representing the 1,720 drivers and mechanics who man and service urban buses.

In a statement, Harlow said while negotiations have been in progress since late August including the last 10 days under mediation officer Gus Leonidas, "limited progress has been made."

The union's advisory board "has repeatedly advised the Hydro that our membership is in no mood for protracted and long-drawn-out discussions that weren't going to produce some realistic progress. Wages and other matters are still in dispute."

The last contract expired Oct. 31 and provided $3.75 an hour for drivers and $4.35 an hour for mechanics.

The dispute affects 220 union members in the Victoria area. They will vote on a strike on Friday, Harlow said.

Freak Mishap Victim Still Poor

Wayne Joseph Renshaw, the Squamish teen-ager who lay in the bush four hours after apparently being seriously injured in a freak traffic accident, is still in poor condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The 17-year-old youth was believed to have been struck by a car that went out of control and hit a power pole while he was walking in the 500 block of Goldstream in the Colwood area.

While police and ambulance attendants assisted passengers in the car to hospital, Renshaw was apparently overlooked as he lay under a bush just three feet from the accident scene.

He was later rescued by residents of the area who heard his groans. Renshaw was suffering head injuries and a broken leg.

Rink Next to Arena Studied

A full-sized ice rink beside Memorial Arena will be the subject of a feasibility study asked for Monday by the Victoria recreation and community services committee.

Preliminary cost estimates and sketches were introduced at the committee meeting by Ald. Ove Witt, who called for the city's and community's help in financing, and handed a personal cheque for $100 to the city comptroller.

Witt said the rink could be built on the rocky ground adjacent to the arena for about $175,000, taking advantage of the arena's equipment, a new rink elsewhere could cost about $400,000, he said.

City manager Dennis Young said it would be unrealistic at this time to expect the city to pay half the cost.

But Witt said he only wanted to see a start on the idea. He said the youngest of the organized hockey players have had to be cut from the arena's practice schedules this year because of the demands on the rink.

A new rink would not have spectator seating, but it would double the practice time available.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF COURAGE, STAMINA and specialized skill can accomplish the seemingly impossible, those two American climbers on Yosemite's El Capitan will soon top that appalling tower. When they do, or if they do, a question already asked by would-be rescuers will be raised again.

Why did they have to climb it?

The classic answer is "Because it's there."

I suspect, though, that the reply once given by a mountaineer to an uninfected enquirer is the sort a man tosses off in order to spare himself the thankless task of trying to explain the not wholly explainable.

It is also an over-simplification. El Capitan is not only there: it has been climbed before. If I remember rightly, a Sierra Club team pioneered the first ascent years ago. Other gifted rock-scramblers have followed.

Logically, a peak or a pinnacle once scaled should hold no further challenge. It's still there, to be sure, but it has been conquered. That should be sufficient.

Do such men entertain a subconscious death-wish? That question has also been asked before. Germany between wars had an elite of young "suicide climbers" who tackled such pitches as the frightful north face of the Eigerwand like Seigfrieds over-eager for Valhalla. English mountainer and poet Geoffrey Winthrop Young asks, "What remains of all I see and know — If I let go?"

It's possible that in some climbers, something of the sort may lurk. But I've never encountered it in my limited hobnobbings with mountaineers, and I very much doubt that the pair on El Capitan entertain any such wish.

Mountaineers as I've observed them accepted the risk factor involved in their sport, but frowned on recklessness. They knew what they were about, even though that fact might be lost on the novice who glimpsed only space between his feet. It was no part of their plan to die on the heights.

Nor did they climb mountains merely from a spirit of conquest. Laurence Grassi, one of Canada's finest climbers in his time, explained that to me once on a Coast Range glacier.

Take himself, for instance, he said. He climbed because he felt better, and keener, and more alive on a mountain than he did anywhere else.

He cupped a match against the glacier wind, and puffed on the gnawed cigar that was the companion of his waking hours. Another thing. A man with his boots on a mountain doesn't bring his low-country worries along with him. The mountain won't let him. It fills his thoughts, and if the climb is a hard one, it demands absolute concentration.

Absolute teamwork, too. It is not enough just to concentrate on your own moves. You must give thought to the others in the party.

And because of these things, the man who comes down off a mountain may be tired, but he is also refreshed in a way that is hard to explain. The mountain has taken from him, and it has given in return.

What Grassi said helps explain why two men, skilled specialists in the rock-climber's craft, should choose to play human fly for days and weeks on a new route up an ancient monolith.

It's a cruel, if self-imposed testing. But the hardship and the risk which can only be minimized to a degree are more than means to an end for them.

While they're roped on El Capitan, they are living life at a pitch of intensity that men captivated by mountains do not achieve on horizontal earth.

BENNETT TO OPEN ART WING

The new $120,000 wing of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria will be opened by Premier Bennett Nov. 25, director Colin Graham announced Monday.

Making up the new wing will be the Founders' Gallery and the Kenneth C. Drury Memorial Gallery. Inaugural display will feature gifts from the Douglas Duncan collection, the Elizabeth B. Marshall bequest, new additions to the Fred and Isabel Pollard collection, and other recent aquisitions.

'Insurance Firm Hired Contractor'

Deputy labor minister William Sands said today the government is not responsible for the fact that a reportedly non-union contractor is making repairs to the Labor Department building on Superior.

Pickets appeared in front of the building Monday afternoon and again early today following the report that the repair job had been given to a non-union contractor.

The building was damaged recently when a motorist drove his car into it. The contractor, listed as L. Levert, was hired by the motorist's insurance company.

"It's strictly between the insurance company and the contractor," Sands said.

He said the accident took place during his holidays, and added it was lucky no staff member was injured. He said those who picketed the building should be glad of that, because the procees of granting certification to local unions around the province has not been hindered.

Schibli said the two workmen did not show up at the site today while pickets were there from 7:30-9 a.m.

Septic Tank Dump 'Leak' Now Plugged

The health board will continue efforts to have septic tank refuse dumped at sea, despite a patch job on the Millstream Road dump to prevent human wastes draining into the Thetis Lake system.

Rubymay Parrott, chairman of the Greater Metropolitan Board of Health, said Monday the Millstream dump, where septic tank cleaning firms now unload their cargos, has been patched up so the wastes will not leak into lakes at lower levels.

The septic tank trucks are using the dump because the firms have been refused permission to use the municipal sewer system. Civic authorities fear rocks and other debris removed from tanks would clog sewer pipelines.

Mrs. Parrott said the health board has been trying to arrange a meeting with the regional board, which is building the Macaulay Point sewer outfall. She said the septic tank issue probably would be discussed at the next meeting of the regional board.

Massive Head Injuries Caused Man's Death

James Maude, 23, of 2596 Second Street, Sidney, died of massive head injuries suffered in a three-car collision Nov. 8, a coroner's jury was told Monday night.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther, attached to St. Joseph's Hospital, said death was caused by skull fractures and extensive bruising, tearing and swelling of teh brain.

Maude died at St. Joseph's 12 hours after being admitted.

The inquest was adjourned by Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Richard Collett, 25, of 5174 Patricia Bay, and Susan Costain, 18, of 6961 Central Saanich, both injured in the accident, are now listed as being in fair condition at St. Joseph's.

Buddhists Told Not to Preach Without Permit

A Buddhist religious group, operating on a downtown street Saturday, was told it can't preach sermons without a permit.

Police took no action against the group, which was apparently talking to passers-by on the sidewalk, until they received a complaint from Eaton's that "hippies" were causing a disturbance.

The group was identified as the Rada Krishna Temple.

Blinding Knife Attack Described by Student

He told court Trach attacked him unexpectedly Sept. 29 after an argument arose during an evening drinking bout in the older man's Langford home at 439 Atkins.

●

Earlier in the trial an RCMP constable appearing as a witness for prosecutor William Anderson had produced a heavy bush knife or machete which he said he found at 439 Atkins.

Earlier in the trial an RCMP constable appearing as a witness for prosecutor William Anderson had produced a heavy bush knife or machete which he said he found at 439 Atkins.

The constable said there appeared to be blood stains on the weapon's 18-inch steel blade.

Whitlock said he and his wife had been invited to the Trach house about 4 p.m. where he and the accused began drinking beer and discussing Russian history.

During the evening, while his wife went out to look after their two small children and run some errands, Whitlock said, he and Trach continued to talk and drink.

He said he noticed that both Mr. and Mrs. Trach "were getting extremely drunk."

The dispute arose, said Whitlock, when he decided to take one of the tranquilizing pills prescribed by his doctor for nervous anxiety.

"From behind me, like some aging pixie, his wife grabbed the pills from over my shoulder and disappeared into the bedroom."

He said he became concerned that Mrs. Trach "thought they were some illicit hallucinatory drug that was going to send her to cloud nine," and told her husband he should get them back.

●

Whitlock said he had no intention of going after the woman into her bedroom and became angry when her husband would do nothing.

"I insulted him. I told him off. I told him he was stupid," he said, and finally held him by the shoulders.

When Trach finally sat down again in a chair, Whitlock said he decided to leave and turned to go to the door. He hesitated, however, because his wife was due to return for him at any minute, he said.

"I went into the centre of the room and I was standing there . . . The next thing I remember I had been hit, here, across the eye.

"He was wielding this knife in a rather hopeless fashion."

"He was yelling, 'I'm a Cossack, I will kill you. I'm a Cossack, I will kill you. Get out of my house!"

●

Whitlock said he was sober at the time of the incident but he couldn't describe the knife which cut him.

"If I hadn't been sober — if I had gone down I would have been killed."

After grappling briefly with Trach he fled through the door and "got into the bush" which lay around the house in a deep "pitch-black" hallow.

He said he was terrified that his wife was going to arrive at the Trach house and be attacked, but he could not find his way in the woods.

Whitlock said he finally found his way to his home at 420-A Atkins by watching the infrequent car headlights on the road.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer Edward Pollard, Whitlock said Trach "showed signs of complete inebriation — complete drunkenness."

Pollard also asked Whitlock if he had not struck Trach in the face, in the chest, and kicked him twice in the groin.

"I deny striking him in any way," he replied.

Just before Ostler adjourned the trial to Wednesday afternoon Whitlock picked up the machete, exhibit one for the prosecution, and said:

●

"If that's the weapon that was used — I mean, a couple of more whacks and I'd have been gone.

Earlier in the trial Whitlock's wife Joanne testified that she had returned to the Trach's after leaving the two men earlier "still talking avidly about Russian history and various political figures."

When she came back at about 9 p.m., Mrs. Whitlock said, she came into the house to find Trach standing against the wall opposite the door.

"At the time he had . . . blood all over his arms. He kept swinging his arm as though he was holding a knife."

She said the first thing Trach said when she entered the room was:

"I lopped off your husband's ear with a sabre. I think I even lopped off both of them."

"I can just see the arm — the hair and all was just matted with blood," she said.

She rushed home to phone the RCMP, she said, because she thought her husband might be dead.

"I didn't see him until about 10:15. He was all covered with blood. It was soaking right into his underwear."

During Pollard's cross-examination she said she saw no marks or bruises on Trach's face when she returned.

Constable Barry Hovis, formerly stationed with the RCMP at Colwood, said he attended at 439 Atkins at approximately 9 p.m. where he found Trach seated at the kitchen table and "an amount of blood on the kitchen floor" leading out to the front door and the front porch.

Hovis said there was also blood on Trach, and that he later found the machete in Trach's bedroom with what appeared to be dried blood on the blade.

●

The constable said Trach "appeared to be quite intoxicated" when he first arrived.

The constable said that Oct. 4 when he returned to the Trach house looking for the vial of pills that started the dispute the accused began "speaking with reference to defending his home."

Trach told him Whitlock struck him in the abdomen. He told Hovis he had been passing blood and said:

"I had a right to defend myself. I don't know where the knife came from, someone just handed it to me and I defended myself."

Dr. V. G. Griswick, an eye specialist who treated Whitlock, said the damage to the eye was serious — a perforating injury 14 millimeters in length that "sliced up through the . . . iris, lens and cornea."

He said the lens of the eye was destroyed.

Esquimalt Wants 'Welfare Rules'

Esquimalt council wants the B.C. government to explain "the ground rules of welfare."

The request came Monday after aldermen questioned a bill of over $20,000 for welfare last month.

Debate was sparked by a routine motion instructing the municipal treasurer to pay last month's bill and ended with the decision to write the government for more detailed information on welfare.

One alderman questioned more than 30 items on the expenditure list related to welfare and totalling more than $20,000.

Ald. Bill Bell said a letter should be sent to Rehabilitation Minister Gaglardi telling him that Esquimalt council was "aware of all the phoney baloney that goes on in welfare."

He said a municipality the size of Esquimalt could not afford to pay $20,000 for welfare in one month.

"Let's tell him (Gaglardi) to send back some of these yahoos who come here from other parts of Canada and from the States to live off our welfare dollars."

Mayor Arthur Young read a letter to council from Gaglardi stating that council has the authority to question payment of welfare to any person.

Young said today he thought none of the council knew enough of welfare procedure and the intent of the letter to the minister was for more information.

He said the council's attitude was to "get a little tougher" with welfare recipients.

FIREMEN INJURED IN SAANICH BLAZE

Two Saanich firemen received minor injuries Monday as they battled a major house fire at 399 Braefoot Road.

Jack Northrup and Lieut. Harold Armitage were released after hospital treatment for minor cuts.

The fire, which ripped through the two-storey, split-level home, extensively damaged every room in the building.

Owner of the house is Victor Wilk.

The fire apparently started in a basement room and was swept through the structure by a strong wind.

No damage estimate was available and no cause was given.

Canada May Become 'Island in Metric Sea'

OTTAWA (CP) — North America could end up as an "island in a metric sea" if it does not convert to the metric system of weights and measures, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the Senate banking committee Tuesday.

Appearing before the committee as chief witness for a weights and measures bill, Mr. Basford said Japan has "gone metric" and when the United Kingdom converts to the system to be in line with other European countries, North America might be in the costly position of producing goods in one measurement system for domestic use and another for trade purposes.

"I think we should not be debating whether to convert but how to convert," he said. But Canada would have to move hand-in-hand with the United States in order to do this.

The bill undergoing Senate committee scrutiny would embed the metric system in Canadian law in preparation for eventual conversion as set out in the government's policy white paper tabled last January.

The metric system is a decimal measuring system with the metre, the litre and the gram as units of length, capacity and weight.

In replying to questioning, Mr. Basford said the bill, still to be passed by both the Senate and Commons, provides for the use of two systems of measurement in trade in Canada—the customary inch-pound unit system and the metric system.

LEGISLATION NEEDED

He said the present Canadian system could not be abolished without Parliament passing legislation to that effect.

The proposed bill is designed to modernize existing weights and measures legislation, the minister said, but is also a consumer protection measure.

Mr. Basford said the proposed legislation is aimed at ensuring that the consumer gets a true measure of the commodity he buys.

The bill sets new requirements of accurate measure on coin-operated machines which dispense liquids or which measure time, such as coin washers or parking meters.

It would regulate devices for measuring car mileage, so that the odometers on used cars could not be turned back to mislead consumers.

Walkathon Raises Over $2,000

Participants in a 10-mile walkathon Sunday raised $2,184.55 to go toward completion of the Sidney Scout-Cub Hall.

Of 143 starters, 109 completed the hike. Highest pledge sheet of the day was turned in by Gail Garland who raised $110. David Allard was second with $108.

Bobby Bryant, 12, of 10081 Fifth St., completed the 10-mile route in one hour and 10 minutes. He was followed by Paul Welle and David Langtry.

First cub-scout to finish was Chris Flint, and the first girl guide was Pat Evans.

The walkathon took place in driving wind and rain. One mother found her little girl walking in shoes that had fallen apart along the way. A switch was quickly made, and the mother returned home shoeless and sockless.

Communists Attack

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Communist troops launched a fresh round of heavy attacks today along the Cambodian northern front where a government position was apparently weaker than at any time since a North Vietnamese offensive began eight days ago.

Vandalism At Church Unsolved

Three altars were found desecrated Saturday morning. Banners, vessels and flowers had been thrown down.

Police Court

A 53-year-old man who knocked down a woman pedestrian after running a red light on Friday the 13th and then fled the scene was fined a total of $1,100 Monday.

Frederick Dennis, of 1157 Johnson, pleaded guilty to impaired driving failing to remain at the scene of an accident Friday, and also failing to remain at the scene of an accident after his car collided with a taxi Oct. 26.

Judge William Ostler fined him $200 and $400 for the offences of Friday and $500 for the Oct. 26 offence.

"You were impaired, you drove against a red light and you struck a pedestrian. It was only the sheerest of good luck that you didn't kill that woman," Ostler said.

He ordered Dennis to pay the fine at $100 per month.

Two men who pleaded guilty to joint charges of stealing a car and possessing tools for the purpose of breaking and entering were remanded to Nov. 23 for sentence.

Robert Parker, 23, of 728 Cloverdale, and David MacInnis, 24, of no fixed address, told arresting officers they intended to use the tools for a burglary to provide money for a heroin habit.

Parker asked Ostler if he could see a doctor because he was sick.

"I've got hepatitis and I'm a heroin addict," he said.

The Crown submitted a record for Parker dating back to 1965 and including such offences as assault causing bodily harm, robbery, uttering forged documents, armed robbery, and theft over $50.

Ostler ordered a presentence report for MacInnis, who had no previous record.

★ ★ ★

The judge also ordered a presentence report for 18-year-old Michael Cross of 841 Ellery.

The vocational school student pleaded guilty to dangerous driving, wilful damage under $50, being a minor in possession of liquor, common assault and driving without an inspection sticker on his car.

Court was told the charges arose out of a dispute Cross had with his girl friend.

After refusing to leave his girl friend's apartment at 122 Menzies following a party there, Cross struck her in the face, twisted her arm, and after going out of the apartment turned and threw a beer bottle through a window.

When police arrived at the scene, Ostler was told, Cross sped away in his car, ignoring the siren and flashing red light of the pursuing vehicle.

He shot one roadblock but was stopped by another at Belleville and Government and allowed his car to roll into a police vehicle.

There were a dozen bottles of beer in the trunk and one bottle on the front seat with the driver, court was told.

Cross told Ostler he was attending vocational school with financial assistance from Canada Manpower and social welfare.

"Whose car was it?" Ostler asked.

"My own," replied Cross.

"Whose liquor was it?"

"My own."

"Was it your understanding that Manpower and Welfare were to pay for those items?" the judge asked.

He remanded the case to Nov. 25.

Robbin Brigance, 27, of Sooke, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, was fined $300 and permitted to pay $50 a month.

He told court he was a self-employed farmer.

WANTS A BIG FAMILY

All but one of 12 Central American students, aged 11 to 18, have been placed with city families for a 2½-month stay starting Dec. 4. The students, from Costa Rica, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Panama, will attend public school here during their stay.

Not placed yet by the International Students Exchange Program is Fernando Pages, 15, of San Jose, Costa Rica.

Mr. and Mrs. Casey O'Gorman, 2904 Phyllis, have placed the other 11 children. The trouble with Fernando is that he would like to stay with a large family because he has only one brother.

"We've had one offer, but the family only has one boy, and that would be just another brother for Fernando," Mrs. O'Gorman said today.

PAKISTAN FEARS EPIDEMIC

Survivors Hit by Cholera

Soviet Robot Exploring Lunar Surface

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet scientists soft-landed a robot spaceship on the moon today and then sent an eight-wheel vehicle trundling over the lunar surface in a series of earth-controlled experiments.

Lunokhod I—the first vehicle on the moon—rolled down a special gangway from its mothership early today two hours 41 minutes after Luna 17 slid down to a soft landing in the moon's Sea of Rains at 6:47 a.m. (10:47 p.m. EST Monday), the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Lunokhod—the name means moon vehicle—is carrying scientific apparatus, control gear, radio communications systems and television observation equipment to perform experiments monitored back on earth, Tass said.

"For the first time in the history of astronautics an automatic moon vehicle, controlled from earth, was taken to the moon and began scientific investigations," Tass said.

Moon Truck Crawls 65 Feet

The moon truck crawled 65 feet away from its landing point in initial experiments, Tass added. The Lunokhod is controlled from a special communications centre in the Soviet Union, and scientists are using television cameras aboard the revolutionary vehicle for information on its position and the nature of the surrounding lunarscape.

Soviet science has entered an age of "effective new means of moon exploration with the help of automatic machines," Tass said as it gave word of the Russian space spectacular.

Tass also reported that both Lunokhod and the Luna spaceship carried Soviet flags and pennants and bas-reliefs of Lenin.

All systems aboard Lunokhod were functioning normally, Tass added. The Russians had given no previous indication that anything as dramatic as the Lunokhod experiment had been planned for the Luna 17 moon mission.

Soviets Favor Automation

Observers said the achievement underlines the Russian enthusiasm for space exploration by automated means and reflects the technical lengths to which they are carrying their unmanned space probe program.

Tass also revealed that the moon vehicle is carrying a piece of foreign equipment—a French-built reflector for laser location experiments.

France and the Soviet Union have been co-operating in space techniques for some time but this is believed the first time a Russian ship has carried non-Soviet equipment.

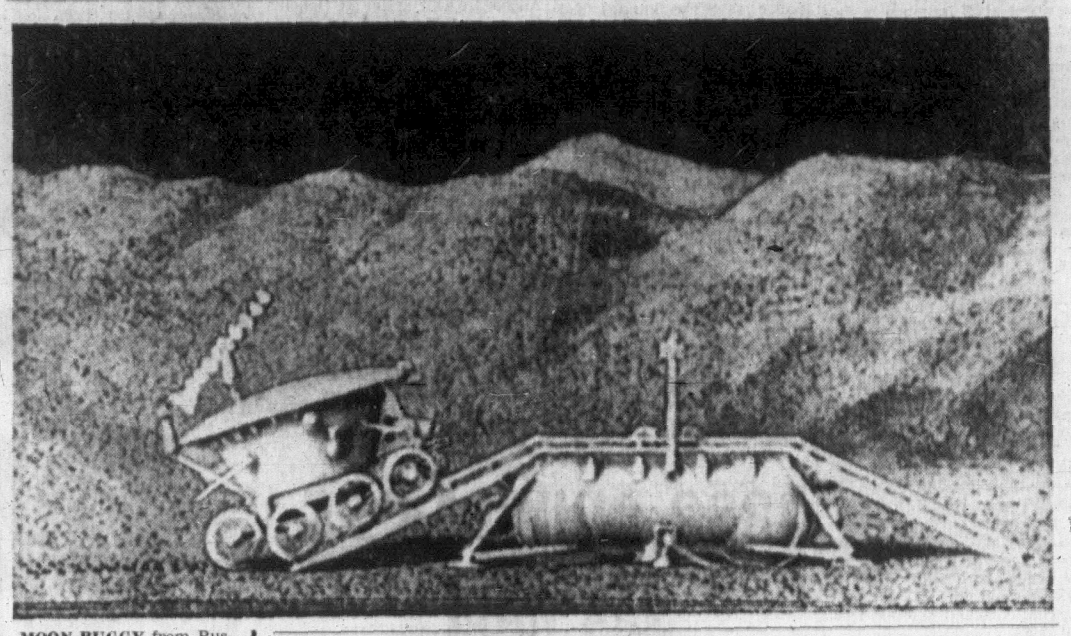

Director Heinz Kaminski of the observatory at Bochum, West Germany, who reported the Luna landing earlier, said that Luna 17 is a vastly improved version of Luna 16, which brought back the Soviet Union's first lunar sample in September.

Luna 17 was launched Nov. 11 and went into orbit around the moon Sunday, following closely the pattern set by its predecessor, Luna 16.

Luna 16 scored two moon firsts for the Soviet Union, both by scooping out lunar soil automatically and launching a capsule containing the precious moondust on its way back to earth.

A sample of the dust went on public display for the first time Monday at Moscow's exhibition of economic achievements. It looks like grey gunpowder in its glass case, but viewed through a magnifying glass propped beside it, it looks more like clay.

MOON BUGGY from Russia made a successful soft landing on the moon, announced Tass, the Soviet news agency. An artist with the agency depicts the self-propelled lunar module as eight-wheeled and says it has conducted experiments 65 feet from the mother ship. The buggy is controlled from Russia.

Dead Estimated Up to 500,000

DACCA (CP) — Cholera spread today among hungry, homeless survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that devastated heavily populated islands at the mouth of the Ganges River and stretches of the East Pakistani coast behind them.

Estimates of the total casualties were still only guesses, although some relief officials said Monday night that the count of the dead had reached 55,000. Information Secretary Syed Ahmed spoke of possibly "300,000 or 500,000" dead, adding that such numbers were not confirmed.

Cholera, a disease endemic to the area, was reported spreading on Hatia, one of the stricken islands in the Ganges Delta cyclone alley. Three ships sent there with medical supplies were waiting for swift currents to subside so they could land their cargo.

Officials feared a widespread epidemic due to polluted water and the destruction of sanitation facilities.

A health department spokesman said nearly one million doses of anti-cholera vaccine had been sent to the area with a large shipment of safe drinking water.

OUTLINES AREA

Relief Commissioner A. M. Anisuzzaman said the storm early Friday hit an area of 2,388 square miles in five districts with 2.2 million people. Casualty reports still were unobtainable from many areas because of ruined communication facilities, he said.

The commissioner himself put the official death toll at 32,771 with more that 2,000 known to be missing. But he admitted the survey was by no means complete.

'Bodies Rotting On Beach'

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

MANPURA, Bay of Bengal (AP) — Human bodies mingled with the carcasses of cattle today rotting together on a beach of this stricken island in the heart of the East Pakistan cyclone disaster area.

Survivors begged for water and food as the first visitors from the outside arrived here since a tidal wave washed at least 10,000 of the island's 26,000 population to their deaths.

Survivors in damp skirtlike wraparounds clutched the hands of visitors and in one instance bent to kiss their feet. They wanted food that was not spoiled and water not drawn from pools polluted with the bodies of men and animals.

FLQ Note Probed

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are investigating today the authenticity and contents of another note purported to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The note, received Monday by French-language radio station CKAC, was immediately turned over to police. A CKAC spokesman declined comment on the contents of the note and said it was not broadcast by the station.

A police spokesman said that the note, signed by the Louis Riel cell, was being examined by technical experts. He did not divulge the contents.

Meanwhile, director Maurice St. Pierre of the provincial police ordered officers from 16 suburban municipalities on the western part of Montreal Island to make house-to-house calls in their respective areas.

One police chief said the men were told to check out vacant houses and recently occupied houses.

Ottawa To Resist U.S. Demands

WASHINGTON (CP) —President Nixon has served notice his administration will renew its demand that the five-year U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement be revised to eliminate provisions favoring Canada.

But officials in Ottawa said Monday Canada will continue to resist the American demands.

In his annual report to Congress on the agreement, Nixon says the continuation of the portions of the 1965 pact favoring Canada "would be contrary to the premise on which the United States entered the agreement, namely that market forces would be allowed to determine the most economic pattern of investment production and trade."

At issue between the two countries is Annex A of the agreement, under which the Canadian auto industry received special transitional arrangements which Nixon noted would continue "until its smaller industry could adjust operations to the much larger North American market."

Under this proviso, Canada gives duty-free treatment to motor vehicles and original equipment only when imported by qualified manufacturers. These manufacturers

BILL WOULD DULL 'WATCHDOG'S' TEETH

Times News Services

OTAWA — Legislation was introduced into the Commons Monday which would limit activities of Canada's auditor-general.

The legislation enables the government to criticize the auditor-general, watchdog over federal spending, after he publishes his annual report on "fraud, default or mistake" in federal accounts.

The new bill was presented in the name of C. M. Drury, treasury board president.

★ ★ ★

After Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson issued his latest critical report last spring, Drury and several other ministers responded with what many took as criticism.

The legislation also authorizes the government to publish its own observations on the findings of the auditor-general's office at the same time as the annual audit.

Three months' notice would have to be given the government concerning the contents of the auditor-general's report.

POLICE CHARGE 30 IN DRUG NET

Local police and the RCMP launched a roundup of people charged with drug offences this morning.

Thirty people had been charged by noon and 16 of them were under arrest.

RCMP Staff Sgt. William Murdoch said the charges, mostly for trafficking, involved heroin as well as the so-called soft drugs, marijuana, hashish and LSD.

Murdoch said the drug raids were a co-ordinated effort, under way simultaneously on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

Locally, Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt police worked with the RCMP and began making arrests at 8 a.m.

A number of the people charged were expected to appear in Victoria provincial court later today.

Liberals Gain In Byelections

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The youth vote appeared to have little effect on the outcome of three federal byelections Monday as the Liberals improved their standing in the Commons by one seat.

Leopold Corriveau took the Quebec riding of Frontenac from the Creditistes for the Liberals while Maurice Dupras held Labelle for the Liberals and Jack Murta retained the Manitoba riding of Lisgar for the Progressive Conservatives.

The Liberals now have 154 Commons seats to 73 for the Conservatives, 23 for the NDP and 13 for the Creditistes. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux sits as independent member for Stormont-Dundas and brings the Commons total to 264 seats.

TOTAL VOTE FALLS

It was the first time 18 to 20-year-olds could vote federally and they boosted the number of eligible voters in each riding— 15 per cent to 38,608 in Frontenac, 14 per cent to 47,000 in Labelle and seven per cent to 34,000 in Lisgar.

Despite this the total vote in all three ridings fell from returns in the 1968 general election.

In Frontenac the total vote fell to 23,531 from 26,902, in Labelle to 20,961 from 29,867 and in Lisgar to 19,516 from 23,497.

It is the first time the House has been full since Ed Schreyer resigned his NDP seat to lead the party to power in Manitoba in June, 1969.

Arab Approval Given Syria Coup

By The Associated Press

Egypt, Libya and Sudan endorsed today Gen. Hafez Assad's coup in Syria and said they are ready to admit Syria as a fourth partner in their projected federation.

Libya's head of state, Col. Muammar Kadafi, made the declaration on behalf of the three Arab countries after a 24-hour visit to Damascus, Syria's capital.

His statement was broadcast by the state-controlled Damascus radio.

Egypt and Syria were linked in the United Arab Republic in 1958 but it collapsed in three years.

In an earlier broadcast, Assad said the planned federation has "rekindled the hopes of the Arab masses in an early Arab unity."

KGB PLOT?

By VICTOR ZORZA
(Special to the Times)

LONDON (NANA) — The mysterious appearance in the West of Nikita Khrushchev's "reminiscences" looks like a move in a deep-laid psychological warfare plot hatched in the Kremlin. The linking of the name of Victor Louis with the transmission of the Khrushchev material to Time-Life means that the Soviet government, whose servant Louis is, has had a hand in the affair.

There is a pattern in all this activity which suggests that the KGB's "Department D" (for disinformation) is building up step by step a network of contacts and arrangements which would enable it to command the use of the West's massive publicity media for some special purpose of its own.

Any similarity between all this and an international spy thriller is not purely coincidental. Victor Louis has often figured as the hero of such tales in situations which were not at all fictional.

Louis, a Soviet citizen residing in Moscow, also acts as a correspondent for Western newspapers. This enable him to undertake frequent foreign travels during which he has performed important if unorthodox duties for the Soviet foreign ministry in countries where Russia has no formal representation—as, for instance, in Spain and Formosa.

Earlier this month, he was in Kuwait, and has since then been reported in Fiji.

Louis and several men from Time-Life are reported in the Danish press to have stayed at the Hotel d'Angleterre in Copenhagen at the end of August, when the Khrushchev deal was apparently negotiated. His non-journalistic functions have often been mentioned in the world press.

The New York Times once said, in a biographical note, that Victor Louis was "a Soviet citizen believed to have close connection with the Soviet secret police." He had carried out in the past "special tasks" in the field of foreign propaganda—"apparently at the behest of the Soviet KGB, or secret police, of the Soviet foreign office, or both."

As far back as August 1967, the "New York Times"
